Introduction

Fans & Readers:

Thank you for coming back another year and reading what is officially the Eleventh Annual Boro Fan Almanac. It goes without saying, but this is served as a prediction report. As you may or may not know, I release weekly rankings on my website, borofanohio.net, and have been doing so since 2011. When reading the report, please remember that I have not seen every result. Also, when reading the report, keep in mind that head- to- head results do count, but the overall rankings are amongst “the field” and not focused on one particular head-to-head win/loss. I hope that you guys enjoy reading this as much as I do in putting it together. Thank you for the continuous support and attention that you guys show for The Almanac and website year in and year out, it means a lot. Remember to follow me on Twitter @BoroFan_OH_WRST. I would also like to give a special thanks to my good friend and editor, Dominic Petrella. It seems as though we are getting ready to witness another great postseason in OHSAA Wrestling. Hope everyone enjoys!

Yours in Wrestling,

Billy Schaefer

Returning state qualifier D’Alessandro is the slight favorite to capture the lightweight crown in the big school division after beating Joy, 1-0, back in December. He missed a few weeks of action in late January/early February but recently returned to win a Western Reserve Conference title. D’Alessandro has been perfect so far this season with a 30-0 record. Joy seems to clearly be the top contender here, as he has beaten McBurney by six points and Bennett by five points. D’Alessandro and Joy both exit Hoover, so we could see them wrestle back-to-back weekends in the finals. If D’Alessandro is able to win it all, he would be the eighth state champ in Mayfield history and the first Wildcat since Mike Ward in 2005.

Hoover is absolutely stacked at this weight with three wrestlers ranked in the top four and 12 total ranked wrestlers; that is the most among all four districts. Perrysburg has three wrestlers in the Top 5 but does lack overall depth. The northwest district has the least amount of wrestlers ranked with only five. A couple other names to watch there are Koprowski (North Royalton) and Foye (Avon).

38. EJ Cunningham (Barberton) Freshman – NCH14
39. Cameron Chaney (Trenton Edgewood) Junior – KF9

This should be one of the more interesting weights to watch unfold in March. Freshman phenom Ayoub is the slight favorite over 2019 state placer Brugh. Ayoub won their only meeting, 5-3, at state duals a couple weeks ago. I think this weight is very deep compared to the other two divisions in Ohio. Ultimately, I wouldn't be surprised if anyone ranked in the Top 15 or so ends up finishing in the top three.

Perrysburg looks like the strongest district at this weight. The northwest district has three projected state placers and five wrestlers in the Top 10. Hoover is also very strong at this weight. The northeast district has two projected state placers and has the most ranked wrestlers with 14. Darby has the least amount of wrestlers ranked with only seven. A couple other names to watch at the central district are Parker (Big Walnut) and Smith (Newark).

 29. Gabe Ohle (Westerville North) Senior – HD8
 30. David Gelman (Moeller) Junior – KF7
 31. Dominic Ricco (Mentor) Senior – NCH10
 32. Parker Lee (Vandalia Butler) Sophomore – KF8
 33. Channing Thornton (Thomas Worthington) Junior – HD9
 34. Ryan Wissmar (Springboro) Sophomore – KF9
 35. Kadin Walls (Teays Valley) Junior – HD10
 36. Rahul Raghuram (Dublin Coffman) Sophomore – HD11
 37. Nick You (Perrysburg) Sophomore – PB7
 38. Tony Gill (Toledo Whitmer) Senior – PB8
 39. J.T. Furko (Toledo St. John's Jesuit) Senior – PB9
 40. Dylan Pennekamp (Oak Hills) Sophomore – KF10

Just like the first two projected state champs in Division 1, 2019 state runner-up Seefeldt looks like a slight favorite to capture the state crown here. The future Penn Quaker recently beat top contender Jett, 3-1, at state duals a couple weeks. Although he is ranked fifth and has taken a couple losses this year to lower ranked wrestlers, 2019 state champion Fenton should not be counted out. The Virginia commit didn't look right in his brief return this season and has been out since, but I hear he will be back for the postseason. It is also important to remember that Fenton had wins over Seefeldt and Jett last season at state duals. Fenton also beat Seefeldt in the state finals at 106 back in 2019.

This is definitely one of those rare weights where anyone in the Top 40 or beyond has the ability to qualify for the state tournament. I would easily tab this as one of strongest weights at Darby. The central district has two projected state placers and also leads the way with 12 total ranked wrestlers. Perrysburg is also very strong with three projected state placers and has a respectable nine total ranked wrestlers. A few other names to watch at the already crowded northwest district are Zaborski (Toledo Start), Russo (Olmsted Falls), and Heasley (Avon). Russo pinned Fenton in January but has a few losses to unranked wrestlers. One of those losses was a 6-2 decision to Heasley at their conference tournament. Fairmont also looks pretty strong here with 10 ranked wrestlers and has a few wrestlers just outside the Top 40 that could also be in the mix at the southwest district in Krull (Miamisburg), Roberts (West Clermont), Harter (Loveland), and Brown (Colerain). The latter two had notable wins last season over Pennekamp.

- Projected Champion: Dustin Norris (LaSalle) Senior – KF1
2. Ismael Ayoub (Dublin Coffman) Junior – HD1
 3. Brock Herman (Brecksville) Sophomore – NCH1
 4. Jeremy Ginter (Toledo Whitmer) Freshman – PB1
 5. Mikey Lewarchick (Wadsworth) Senior – NCH2
 6. Dominic DiTullio (Mason) Senior – KF2
 7. Luke Acuna (Centerville) Junior – KF3
 8. David Miller (North Royalton) Senior – PB2
 9. George Orlando (Upper Arlington) Senior – HD2
 10. Drew Dulcie (Massillon Perry) Junior – NCH3
 11. Corey Haney (Medina Highland) Junior – NCH4
 12. Cole McKinley (Sylvania Northview) Junior – PB3
 13. Andrew Supers (Medina) Sophomore – NCH5
 14. Myles Takats (Perrysburg) Sophomore – PB4
 15. Jonathan Dimos (Massillon Jackson) Senior – NCH6
 16. Kenneth Lambert (Strongsville) Junior – PB5
 17. Jake Gooding (Westerville North) Senior – HD3
 18. Wyatt Moore (Hilliard Davidson) Sophomore – HD4
 19. P.J. Murphy (Elder) Freshman – KF4

20. Noah Mendez (Amherst Steele) Senior – PB6
21. Jared Counts (North Ridgeville) Junior – PB7
22. Jayden Colon (Parma) Junior – PB8
23. Max Sponseller (Uniontown Lake) Sophomore – NCH7
24. Patrick Androsik (St. Edward) Freshman – PB9
25. Bryson Palmer (Westland) Senior – HD5
26. Nathan Thompson (Marysville) Senior – HD6
27. Adam Gintert (Olentangy Liberty) Junior – HD7
28. Jacob Hutsler (Lancaster) Senior – HD8
29. Connor Holm (Elyria) Freshman – PB10
30. T.J. Barnes (Findlay) Junior – PB11
31. Nolan Moore (Moeller) Senior – KF5
32. Antonio Shelley (Mentor) Freshman – NCH8
33. Matthew Hamad (Nordonia) Freshman – NCH9
34. Tamas Eder (Delaware Hayes) Senior – HD9
35. Slade Waller (Grove City) Sophomore – HD10
36. Caden Ellison (Hilliard Bradley) Sophomore – HD11
37. Matt Hartle (Hudson) Senior – NCH10
38. Brian Crevar (Walsh Jesuit) Sophomore – NCH11

This is definitely one of the toughest and deepest weights overall in Ohio. The 2019 state champ Norris, a Purdue commit, is the slight favorite to capture his second state crown. He recently beat Herman, 3-1, in sudden victory at state duals. Norris also beat Herman, 9-5, at the Jesse Campbell Memorial Duals in January. Top contender Ayoub also has a win over Herman, 1-0, back in December at the Elyria Duals. Norris, Ayoub, and Herman all exit separate districts, which means one of them will likely be on opposite sides of the other two at the state tournament.

Fairmont looks very strong at the top with three projected state placers. The southwest district, however, does lack overall depth with only five total wrestlers ranked above. A handful of other wrestlers to watch at Fairmont are Epstein (Lakota East), Hoskins (Vandalia Butler), Belt (Sidney), Lange (Trenton Edgewood), and Kaye (Piqua). Hoover and Perrysburg both have very good depth with each district having 11 total ranked wrestlers.

132

Projected Champion: Richie Delsanter (St. Edward) Senior – PB1

2. Casey Wiles (LaSalle) Senior – KF1
3. Dy'vaire VanDyke (Walsh Jesuit) Sophomore – NCH1
4. Cael Saxton (Avon) Senior – PB2
5. Christopher Earnest (Wadsworth) Sophomore – NCH2
6. Ethan Birden (Dublin Coffman) Freshman – HD1
7. Mike Daly (Oregon Clay) Senior – PB3
8. Allenson Denkins (Perrysburg) Junior – PB4
9. Jacob Brewer (Colerain) Senior – KF2
10. Brayden Zenni (Moeller) Senior – KF3
11. Conner Kleinberg (Springboro) Sophomore – KF4
12. Jacob Shanklin (Upper Arlington) Senior – HD2
13. Jimmy Phadphom (Findlay) Senior – PB5
14. Hunter Ford (Olentangy Liberty) Senior – HD3
15. Mahdi Shoman (North Olmsted) Junior – PB6
16. Cainan Comerford (Olmsted Falls) Senior – PB7
17. Christian Giltz (Massillon Perry) Sophomore – NCH4
18. Ben Sponseller (Uniontown Lake) Senior – NCH3
19. Conner Burrus (Elyria) Senior – PB8
20. Manny Scordos (Brecksville) Junior – NCH5
21. Israel Petite (Nordonia) Freshman – NCH6
22. David Shannon (Austintown Fitch) Junior – NCH7
23. Fuanyi Fobellah (Westerville South) Senior – HD4
24. Draven Hubley (Marion Harding) Junior – HD5
25. Michael Dawkins (Reynoldsburg) Senior – HD6
26. Hayden Chase (Toledo Whitmer) Junior – PB9
27. Toriano Houston (Shaker Heights) Senior – PB10
28. Khaled Askar (Westlake) Junior – PB11
29. Anthony Santagata (St. Ignatius) Senior – PB12
30. Chase Crutchley (Medina Highland) Freshman – NCH8
31. Luke Adams (Fairfield) Senior – KF5
32. Lincoln Witt (Marysville) Junior – HD7
33. Spencer Meng (Centerville) Junior – KF6
34. Aidan Williams (Elder) Senior – KF7
35. Dominic Byrd (Parma) Junior – PB13

Delsanter, a two-time state placer and future Penn Quaker, is another slight favorite to win it all here. Wiles, also a two-time state placer, and VanDyke look to be Delsanter's toughest challengers. Both have missed some time this year, but I hear both should be ready to go for the postseason. All three exit separate districts, which means one of them will likely be on opposite sides of the other two at the state tournament.

Perrysburg is by far the strongest district overall at this weight. The northwest district has four projected state placers and the most ranked wrestlers with 13. Darby and Fairmont have the least amount of wrestlers ranked with seven each. A couple other wrestlers to watch are Blain (Thomas Worthington) at Darby and Szczepaniak (Lakota West) at Fairmont.

Projected Champion: Jake Niffenegger (LaSalle) Junior – KF1

2. Joey Blaze (Perrysburg) Sophomore – PB1
3. Colin Roberts (Austintown Fitch) Senior – NCH1
4. James Bronstrup (Brecksville) Senior – NCH2
5. Quentin Whitehill (Medina) Junior – NCH3
6. Jacob Reed (Lancaster) Senior – HD1
7. Zander Graham (Teays Valley) Junior – HD2
8. Shane Heil (Berea-Midpark) Senior – PB2
9. Tyler Wittreich (Painesville Riverside) Senior – NCH4
10. Jimmy Baumann (Dublin Coffman) Senior – HD3
11. Zach Evans (North Canton Hoover) Senior – NCH5
12. Olathe Seigla (Trenton Edgewood) Senior – KF2
13. Max Boaz (Lakota East) Senior – KF3
14. Ethan Mitchell (Findlay) Sophomore – PB3
15. Ethan Wannett (Ashtabula Lakeside) Senior – NCH6
16. Creed Hill (Medina Highland) Sophomore – NCH7
17. David Shue (Wadsworth) Junior – NCH8
18. Dominic Mudry (North Royalton) Junior – PB4
19. Vince Randall (Stow-Munroe Falls) Junior – NCH9
20. Ryan Walker (West Clermont) Senior – KF4
21. Tanner Beerman (Fairfield) Sophomore – KF5
22. Eugene Harney (Sycamore) Freshman – KF6
23. Broc Fitzpatrick (Olentangy Liberty) Freshman – HD4
24. Kody Kaimann (Elder) Senior – KF7
25. Parker Frederick (Anthony Wayne) Junior – PB5
26. Joey Minick (Uniontown Lake) Junior – NCH10
27. Jason Waller (Massillon Perry) Senior – NCH11
28. Caleb Lake (Chillicothe) Senior – HD5
29. Josh Melms (Marysville) Junior – HD6
30. David Jordan (Grove City) Junior – HD7
31. Andrew Stoll (Holland Springfield) Senior – PB6
32. Santino Humphrey (Lorain) Sophomore – PB7
33. Hunter Martin (Beavercreek) Sophomore – KF8
34. Brenden Allberry (Watkins Memorial) Sophomore – HD8

35. Izzak Pedraza (Elyria) Senior – PB8
36. Carson Atkins (Olmsted Falls) Junior – PB9
37. Jack Bush (St. Ignatius) Senior – PB10
38. Matt Durbin (St. Edward) Sophomore – PB11
39. Caden Moore (Little Miami) Junior – KF9
40. Rhys Fairall (Newark) Junior – HD9

The 2019 state runner-up at this weight, Niffenegger, is favored to capture the state crown this time around. He has been at 138 for all three seasons so far of his high school career. I think Blaze, Roberts, and Bronstrup look like Niffenegger's toughest challengers. Niffenegger recently beat Bronstrup, 5-3, at state duals a couple weeks ago. Based on that result, it seems like Niffenegger is another slight favorite in Division 1. Roberts and Bronstrup both exit Hoover, which means there is a chance the district champ could possibly avoid the other three wrestlers ranked in the top four.

Hoover looks absolutely loaded at this weight. The northeast district has four projected state placers and 11 total wrestlers ranked in the top 26. This looked like one of the thinner weights at Perrysburg until recently when I heard Heil will be dropping down from 145, and Humphrey will be moving up here all the way from 126. All four districts have pretty good depth with each having at least nine ranked wrestlers above.

145

- Projected Champion: Nate Burnett (Elyria) Junior – PB1
2. Jack Haskin (Toledo Whitmer) Senior – PB2
 3. Kael Voinovich (Brecksville) Freshman – NCH1

Like 113, this should be one of the more exciting weights at the state tournament, as I think anyone in the top seven has the ability to win it all. Burnett, a 2019 state placer and Clarion Commit, is the slight favorite to capture his first state title. His father, Erik, also attended Clarion and was an NCAA All-American at 118 pounds in 1992. Haskin, a 2019 state placer and Lake Erie commit, looks to be Burnett's top challenger. Burnett and Haskin have not met this season. They did, however, wrestle each other twice last year. Burnett won the first match, 1-0, and the second match, 3-1, in overtime. If Haskin is able to win it all, he would be Whitmer's sixth state champ and their first since Denver Beck in 1968. Voinovich and Euton should also be considered serious contenders. Voinovich has notable wins this season over Hacker and two against Heard. Euton has been stellar the last two seasons, posting a combined record of 55-0. I can't wait to watch this weight unfold in March!

Once again, Hoover looks absolutely loaded at this weight. The northeast district has three wrestlers in the top six and 10 wrestlers in the top 24. Fairmont has two projected state placers, but also has the least amount of ranked wrestlers with only four. The depth could hinge on Guerra's status, as he has been out of the lineup for most of the season. A few other wrestlers that will likely be in the mix at the southwest district are Echeman (Vandalia Butler), Moyer (Northmont), and Winfield (Centerville). Fairmont has nine wrestlers ranked at 138, so I wouldn't be surprised if we see a few guys move up a weight class and test the waters here.

Voinovich, who won it all in 2018 as a freshman, is pretty heavily favored to capture his second state title. The future Oklahoma State Cowboy is ranked #1 in the country by most national publications. Garee, a Lake Erie commit, looks to be Voinovich's top challenger. Brecksville and Perrysburg wrestled each other opening weekend, but unfortunately Garee was out. I think Mullins, a future Ohio Bobcat, and Uliano, a future Citadel Bulldog, also have the ability to reach the finals.

Like most weights, Hoover is very deep once again. The northeast district has 17 wrestlers ranked above. Both 160 and 170 at Hoover each have 17 ranked wrestlers a piece, which is the most for a single weight in Division 1. Fairmont is on the opposite end of the spectrum with only four ranked wrestlers. A few other names to watch at the southwest district are Sowders (Harrison), Randolph (Beavercreek), Hornback (Moeller), Barga (Miamisburg), Waller (Centerville), Eads (West Clermont), Nevis (Colerain), and Began (Trenton Edgewood). Began has the most notable win of the group, as he pinned projected state qualifier All (Fairfield) last season.

This is by far the toughest weight in all of Ohio. Gallagher, Fields, and Munguia are all ranked in the Top 10 nationally by most publications. Gallagher, who is ranked #1 in the country, is the favorite to capture his second state title. The future Ohio State Buckeye won his first state title at this weight in 2019, upsetting Connor Brady, 7-6. Fields, a NC State commit, and Munguia, a 2019 state runner-up and Kent State commit, could have probably went down a weight class or up a weight class, but both have ultimately decided to stay here and take on the tougher challenge. The top three guys have not wrestled each other this season, but Fields and Munguia did split bouts last season. Munguia beat Fields at the Walsh Jesuit Ironman, 4-2, but Fields then avenged the loss at their conference tournament, beating Munguia by a score of 9-1. Gallagher, Fields, Munguia, and Ewen all exit Perrysburg. They also all exit separate sectionals, so it's possible that we see the same district and state semifinal matchups.

With the top four here all exiting Perrysburg, I would highly suggest moving up or down a weight. As I mentioned at 152, Hoover has a whopping 17 ranked wrestlers at this weight. Also just like 152, Fairmont has only five ranked wrestlers here. A handful of other names to watch at Fairmont are Boyle (Trenton Edgewood), McCowan (Lebanon), Jones (Colerain), and Thompson (Kettering Fairmont). Darby is much stronger than Fairmont at the top with two projected state placers, but Darby has just one more ranked wrestler (six). A few other names to watch at the central district are Halliday (Delaware Hayes), Coffey (Pickerington North), and whoever the starter is for Olentangy Liberty between Freitag and Dirksmeier.

Walker, a two-time state qualifier, is the slight favorite to capture the state crown here. He beat top contender Messer a month ago at the Wadsworth GIT, 3-2, in overtime. Messer, a George Mason commit, has a notable win over Geog, 7-6, back in December. It seems like all three of them are very close in ability. I would also consider Lake Erie commit Liber a legitimate contender at this weight as well. Only Geog and Liber exit the same district, so it's possible that the district champ avoids the other three wrestlers in the top four.

Like most weights, Hoover is very strong at the top with four projected state placers. Also like most weights, the northeast district has great depth with 15 total ranked wrestlers. Darby is on the opposite end of the spectrum, with only one projected state placer and seven total ranked wrestlers. A handful of other names to watch at the central district are Johnson Edwards (Delaware Hayes), Magyar (Dublin Coffman), Svantner (Olentangy Orange), Wielbacher (Lancaster), and Lenz (Big Walnut).

Hightower, a 2019 state placer at this weight and Princeton commit, is the favorite to capture the state crown here. He has previous wins over Perrine and Evans, who seem to be his top challengers. Hightower beat Perrine twice in freestyle in 2019 and he beat Evans in the sectional finals in 2018. Those results are from almost 2-3 years ago, so they might be irrelevant now. Perrine and Evans met this season at the Elyria Duals, which was a close, low scoring bout won by Perrine. The future Ohio Bobcat upended the future Indiana Hoosier, 3-2. I ultimately wouldn't be surprised if any of the top three are standing atop the podium in March. Hightower and Evans both exit Perrysburg, so that means one of them will likely be on the opposite side of their district counterpart and Perrine as well.

This is another weight where Hoover has four projected state placers. The northeast district also has great depth with 14 total ranked wrestlers. Darby is also very strong at the top with two of the Top 5 ranked wrestlers overall. The central district does, however, have the least amount wrestlers ranked above with only seven. A few other names to watch at Darby are Quillin (Olentangy Liberty), Dempsey (Olentangy Orange), and whoever the starter is for Marysville between McCartney and Seger.

The future Ohio State Buckeye will be looking to stay perfect at the state tournament. Shumate won it all as a freshman at this weight in 2019 and was heavily favored to repeat last season. I would consider Shumate one of the heavier favorites in all of Ohio across all three divisions. Shumate's only loss came this year via injury default. He was leading, 4-3, against Division 2 projected state placer Max Shulaw (Columbus DeSales) prior to getting injured. That was Shumate's first scholastic loss since December 15, 2018. Shumate missed a couple matches after that, but has since returned and looks primed for another strong postseason. Amburgy and List look like Shumate's top challengers. Amburgy recently beat List at state duals, 8-6. The top three here all exit separate districts, so there is a chance Amburgy and/or List is on the opposite side of Shumate at the state tournament.

This looks like one of the tougher weights at Darby. The central district has three of the Top 5 wrestlers, 10 in the top 27, and also leads the way with 11 total wrestlers ranked above. Hoover is also very strong here with four wrestlers in the Top 10. This looks like one of the thinner weights at Perrysburg. The northwest district has only one wrestler in the Top 10 and also has the least amount of wrestlers ranked above (six). A couple other names to watch at Perrysburg are Melchor (Fremont Ross) and Werner (Oregon Clay). An interesting thing to follow at Fairmont will be whether or not Pool (Centerville) returns for the postseason. I haven't seen him in any results this year, but if he does return he would likely be in the Top 15 and a projected state qualifier.

Vanadia, a Purdue commit and 2019 state runner-up, is favored to capture his first title. The future Boilermaker already has beaten top challenger Shephard by major decision, 18-7, about a month ago. He also has a notable win over Russo in early January, 13-4. With Vanadia already owning wins over #2 and #4 by major decision, I expect him to be a major key for Brecksville in the team race. Vanadia and Shephard both exit Hoover, so it's likely that they will be on opposite sides at the state tournament. Although Shephard beat Russo, 9-6, a couple weeks ago, I ultimately wouldn't be surprised if Shephard, Cobb, or Russo toes the line against Vanadia Sunday night.

Perrysburg and Hoover each have three projected state placers. Hoover does look a little stronger though with five wrestlers in the Top 10 and eight wrestlers in the top 18. Hoover's depth could depend on which weight Prusinowski chooses to go for the postseason. He has spent time at both 220 and 285 lately. Also worth noting, he would actually be ranked a few spots higher at 285 compared to here. Darby has great depth at this weight, leading the way with 14 total ranked wrestlers. This is definitely not one of the stronger weights at Fairmont. The southwest district has zero wrestlers in the Top 10 and has just six ranked wrestlers overall. A few other names to watch at Fairmont are Ingram (Fairborn), Back (Vandalia Butler), Kornau (Lakota East), and Glover (Mason).

Green has been absolutely stellar this season and is favored to capture the heavyweight crown. His most notable win came in January when he beat Division 3 projected state champ Meyer (Columbus Grove) via fall in the first period at the Allen East Duals. According to a few football profiles online, he is listed at 6'7" and 265 pounds. He has numerous D1 football scholarship offers, most notably including Iowa State and Cincinnati. His top challenger, Weaver, is also a standout football player and will be playing for Ohio University at the next level. Both of these guys are very athletic compared to most other heavyweights around the state. If Green is able to win it all, he would be Fremont Ross' second state champ in school history and the first Little Giant since Jim Mooney in 1960.

This looks like another weight where Hoover seems absolutely loaded. The northeast district has five wrestlers in the Top 10 and 14 wrestlers in the Top 30. As I mentioned at 220, Prusinowski could be at this weight and would likely be ranked in the Top 5. Fairmont has only two ranked wrestlers, which is the lowest for any district among all three divisions. A boatload of other names that will likely be in the mix at the southwest district are Streuer (Little Miami), Watson (Colerain), Vyes (Lakota West), Rothermel (Trenton Edgewood), Tucker (Elder), Cottrell (Sidney), Back (Vandalia Butler), Jones (Northmont), Spangler (Springboro), Denlinger (Kettering Fairmont), Salter (Cincinnati Northwest), Thompson (Winton Woods), Harvey (Milford), Wilson (Lebanon), and Bowin (Loveland).

Outstanding freshman Jordan is the favorite to capture the lightweight crown. He moved to Graham from Arizona, but I heard he is originally from Iowa. Jordan has wins over several projected state placers in all three divisions, most notably including Division 1 projected state runner-up Joy (Wadsworth) and two against Division 3 projected state champ Hermes (Milan Edison). Cuerbo looks like Jordan's toughest challenger. It seems like he has finally grown into the weight class. Cuerbo has notable wins over Division 1 projected state placer McBurney (Massillon Perry) and Smith. Smith actually led most of the match and was leading with about a minute before Cuerbo pancaked Smith to his back for the fall.

Norwalk is absolutely loaded at this weight. The northwest district has three of the top five wrestlers, five wrestlers in the Top 10, and 10 total ranked wrestlers above. Perry also has tremendous depth, leading the way with 15 ranked wrestlers. Wilmington looks very strong at this weight with three projected state placers, but the southwest district does however have the least amount of wrestlers ranked above with only six. A couple other names to watch at Wilmington are Bradam (Kenton Ridge) and Thacker (Caledonia River Valley).

Yarbrough is favored once again to capture his first state title. The Virginia commit was heavily favored to win it all last year down at 106. He is currently 25-0 and is riding a 60 match winning streak. If Yarbrough is able to bring home the state crown, he would be Copley's fourth state champ in school history and their first since Sam Wheeler in 2011. Sagaris, a Long Island commit, looks like Yarbrough's toughest challenger after beating 2019 state runner-up Crosby recently in a dual meet, 8-1. Neither Yarbrough nor Sagaris have state experience, but that might not be a huge factor this year with everything sort of scaled down regarding the arena and crowd size.

Just like 106, Norwalk has four projected state placers. The northwest district also has tremendous depth, leading with 12 total ranked wrestlers. Also like 106, Wilmington has the least amount of ranked wrestlers with only six. A few other names to watch at the southwest district are Moorman (Clinton-Massie), Hinton (Norwood), Anderson (Franklin), and Nolan (Bellbrook).

The 2019 state placer Clayton is the slight favorite to win what is definitely one of the deeper weights in Division 2. He beat top contender McCrone, 6-2, in a dual meet at Lake Catholic in late January. Clayton seems much improved this year. Last year he narrowly beat Sagaris, 7-6, in the third place match at districts, while this year he beat Sagaris by major decision, 14-1. As I already stated, this is one of the deeper weights in the division, so I ultimately wouldn't be surprised if anyone in the Top 15 or so ends up placing very high in March.

Perry looks very strong at this weight. The northeast district leads with four projected state placers and 13 total ranked wrestlers. Norwalk is also very strong here with six wrestlers in the top 13. Norwalk's strength could take a hit if Deiter is not at this weight. He has missed quite a bit of time this season and has also been at 126 when he has wrestled. His status and weight class will definitely be something to keep an eye on.

The very physical Lautzenheiser is slightly favored to capture his second state title. He won his first state title down at 120 over Gavin Ritter (Wauseon) in 2019. Lautzenheiser beat top contender and 2019 state placer Gessler at state duals a couple weeks ago, 8-3, in overtime. Lautzenheiser is currently 27-0 this season and is riding a 66 match winning streak dating back to last season. Lautzenheiser, along with teammate Davin Rhoads, both will be wrestling at West Virginia in college. Ellis, a 2019 Division 3 state placer who transferred from Legacy Christian, should also be tabbed as a serious contender here. He hasn't wrestled Lautzenheiser or Gessler this year, but he did lose a very close bout to Gessler last season in the finals at the GMVWA Tournament by a score of 1-0. If Ellis is able to win it all, he would be Waynesville's first state champ in school history.

This is another weight where Norwalk looks very strong. The northwest district leads the way with three projected state placers and 11 total ranked wrestlers. Wilmington is also very strong with two of the top three wrestlers and three wrestlers in the top ten. The southwest district could get a boost if Jones (Dayton CJ) is at this weight. He has been at 132, but I heard 126 could be where he ends up. Gallia has only six wrestlers ranked above, which means this could be a popular destination for weight movers. A couple other names to watch there are Kazmirski (St. Clairsville) and Bunting (John Glenn).

Projected Champion: Bret Minnick (Tiffin Columbian) Junior – NO1

2. Nick Hart (Graham) Sophomore – WI1
3. Koen Kish (St. Clairsville) Senior – GA1

39. Shareef Williams (Benedictine) Junior – NO10
40. Tristan Craddock (Cloverleaf) Freshman – PE13

This is definitely going to be my favorite weight to watch unfold in Division 2 at the state tournament. I would tab this as the most wide open weight in Division 2, as I honestly think anyone in the top six can win it all. Minnick is my pick here, but it definitely wasn't easy. Since this is a prediction report, I could have went against the final rankings, but I ultimately stuck with Minnick. He is 1-0 against the top six during this season cycle (fall through now), while everyone else in the top six has at least one loss against a top six foe.

Perry looks very strong with three projected state placers and also leads with 13 total ranked wrestlers. Wilmington is the exact opposite. The southwest district is the only district with only one projected state placer and also has the least amount of ranked wrestlers (seven). Wilmington's depth could take a hit if Jones is at 126. As I mentioned previously, he could be at 126 or 132 for the postseason. A few other names to watch at the southwest district are McCoy (Wilmington), Emerson (Caledonia River Valley), and Battista (Western Brown).

Like 138, I consider this weight rather wide open. I wouldn't be surprised if anyone in the top three brings home the state title. The 2019 state champ and future West Virginia Mountaineer, Rhoads, is the slight favorite here after recently beating top contender Moore at state duals, 7-4. Moore is a two-time state runner-up and will be wrestling at Ohio University next year. I also think Smith is a serious contender here. He seems to improve every week and is currently 34-0 this season. His most notable win came at the Elyria Duals, where he bumped up to 145 and beat Division 1 projected state placer and state title contender, Kael Voinovich, by major decision, 11-2.

Perry and Gallia look very strong here. Perry has three projected state placers, while Gallia has five wrestlers ranked in the top 11. With how tough 138 looks at Gallia and 145 looking even tougher, I think that could lead to a few wrestlers dropping down to 132 instead of moving up to 145. All four districts have pretty good depth with each having at least nine ranked wrestlers.

The 2019 state champ and South Dakota State Commit, Martin, is favored to capture his second state title. The future Jack Rabbit won a nail bitter in the finals in 2019, beating Micah Norwood (Bishop Hartley), 6-5, in overtime. Martin's most notable win this year came at Fricker's Duals, where he beat Division 1 projected state Champ Burnett (Elyria), 5-1. Ours is the only other state placer at this weight and looks like Martin's toughest challenger. Ours took sixth place all the way down at 120 in 2019. If Ours is able to pull the upset, he would be Beaver Local's seventh state champ in school history and the first since Adam Hoppel in 2002.

As I stated at 138, Gallia is absolutely stacked at this weight with three projected state placers and six wrestlers in the top 12. Wilmington looks like the exact opposite on paper. The southwest district has only one projected state placer, who happens to be the projected state champ, but he is also the district's only wrestler ranked in the Top 10. A few other names that could be in the mix at Wilmington are Ihm (Bishop Hartley), Blanton (Caledonia River Valley), Rolf (Clinton-Massie), and Wright (Western Brown). This looks like one of the thinner weights at Perry, which I think could lead to Farris (Chardon) staying at 145. He made 138 for hydration and was ranked at 138 for most of the season, but I decided to rank him here based on the climate.

152

Projected Champion: Peyton Kellar (Vincent Warren) Senior – GA1

2. Douglas Terry (Granville) Senior – WI1
3. Trace Braun (Graham) Senior – WI2
4. Mcalle Callahan (Miami Trace) Senior – GA2
5. Anthony Trivisonno (Lake Catholic) Senior – PE1

37. Jaden King (Celina) Junior – NO10
38. Dominic Tracy (Defiance) Junior – NO11
39. Calvin Gwinn (Akron STVM) Sophomore – NO12
40. Colten Jacobe (Milton-Union) Senior – WI5

Kellar is the slight favorite here after recently beating 2019 state runner-up and top challenger, Terry, in the finals at the Jimmy Wood Invitational, 1-0. Kellar has been absolutely spectacular the last two seasons, posting a 48-0 record last season and is currently 26-0 so far this season. Kellar is riding a 75 match winning streak entering the postseason, which dates all the way back to the 2019 state tournament. That is the second longest winning streak in Ohio, behind Division 2 195 projected state champ Hadyn Danals (Caledonia River Valley), who has an 83 match winning streak. Along with Terry, who will be wrestling at Cleveland State next year, I would also consider Braun a serious contender here as well. Braun has qualified all three years so far, but has yet to reach the podium.

Once again, Gallia looks very strong at this weight with three projected state placers and all four projected state qualifiers ranked in the top 12. Perry is also very strong here with two projected state placers and nine wrestlers ranked in the top 18. The field at 160 doesn't look nearly as deep, which could result in a few wrestlers moving up a weight class. Wilmington looks very strong at the top with two projected state placers and three wrestlers in the top nine. The southwest district does, however, lack depth with only five wrestlers ranked above. A few other names that will likely be in the mix are Woodward (Goshen), Williams (Bethel-Tate), and Miracle (Caledonia River Valley).

Turnbaugh is the favorite at this weight, a weight that looks very, very deep. If Turnbaugh is able to capture the state crown, he would be the first Ontario wrestler to do since his father, Wes Turnbaugh, in 1999. Barnett looks like Turnbaugh's toughest challenger and has a notable win over third-ranked Dodson, 8-3, back in late December. Selman could be a dark horse here, despite being ranked outside the Top 10. He is currently perfect on the season with 27-0 record. I ultimately wouldn't be surprised if anyone ranked in the top 11 reaches the finals.

Gallia is absolutely loaded at this weight with three projected state placers and a whopping 14 wrestlers ranked above. As I stated earlier, Perry looks very thin at this weight compared to most at the northeast district. I think that will result in a few wrestlers making their way here. It sounds like Flohr will be one of those movers, as I hear he will be moving up from 152 to 160 for the postseason. A few other names to watch at the northeast district are Eddy (Alliance), Brubaker (Perry), Gambrill (West Geauga), and Olechnowicz (Revere).

Conley, a 2019 state placer and Cornell commit, is the favorite to capture the state crown here. Welch looks like Conley's toughest challenger after being third-ranked Pappas, 6-5, at the Spartan Holiday Invitational. Welch transferred back home to Ashland this year from Culver Academies (IN), where he was a two-time state qualifier for the Eagles. I think anyone ranked in the Top 5 has the ability to reach the state finals. Conley and Welch both exit the same sectional and district, so it's likely they see each other twice before the state tournament.

A lot like 152, Wilmington looks very strong at the top but lacks overall depth after the top three. The southwest district has three projected state placers, but those are the only wrestlers ranked in the Top 25. Wilmington only has four total ranked wrestlers, which is the least by a wide margin. The three other districts each have at least 10 ranked wrestlers. A few other names that will likely be in the mix at Wilmington are Taylor (Hebron Lakewood), Siegel (Bishop Watterson), Watson (Jonathan Alder), Grandstaff (Marengo Highland), Davis (Wilmington), and Santcartier (Goshen).

This should be another exciting weight to watch unfold in March. Two time state placer and Cornell commit, Mayes, is my pick here over Neves, who is my top-rated freshman overall in Ohio. Both Mayes and Neves hold previous wins over the future Pitt Panther, Hivnor. Mayes pinned Hivnor last year in the semi-finals at Brecksville, while Neves beat Hivnor this year in the blood round at Super 32 in October, 8-4. Despite losing to Mayes and Neves, I still wouldn't count out Hivnor. All three exit separate districts, so one of them will likely be on the opposite of the other two at the state tournament.

Perry is very, very strong at the top with four projected state placers. The northeast district does, however, lack overall depth with only six wrestlers ranked above. The three other districts each have at least nine wrestlers ranked above. The depth at Perry could get a boost if Dougherty decides on 182 instead of 195. He has spent time at both weights this season, and based on the district climate, I decided to rank him at 195. A couple other names to watch at Perry are Brosch (Chardon) and Hancox (Marlington).

The 2019 state runner-up Fishback is the favorite to capture the state crown here. The NC State commit was heavily favored last year to win it all the way down at 160. I think Fishback will definitely be challenged by 2019 state placer and Virginia commit, Danals. The future Cavalier currently has an 88 match winning streak, which is the longest current streak in all of Ohio. Fishback and Danals have very contrasting styles. Fishback is very strong on the mat, while Danals is very strong on his feet and is always attacking at a quick pace. Aurora started their season in January and Fishback missed the first few weeks, so Danals' pace could cause problems for Fishback. If Danals is able to win it all, he would be Caledonia River Valley's second state champ in school history and the first Viking since Eric McIntyre in 1983.

Wilmington is strongest district at this weight by far. The southwest district has three of the top four wrestlers and four wrestlers ranked in the Top 10. Perry is a lot stronger at 182 compared to this weight, so I think we could see a few guys move up. As I stated at 182, Dougherty could be one those guys. The 195 field looks like the better path to qualify for the state tournament, so I ranked him here.

- Projected Champion: Kyle Snider (CVCA) Sophomore – PE1

 39. Brayden Pirone (Poland Seminary) Sophomore – PE11
 40. Tristan Murphy (Beaver Local) Junior – GA9

Snider is the easy choice here. I would consider him one of the heavier favorites in all of Division 2. He is very athletic and very strong on his feet. He also wrestles with a very quick pace and is constantly attacking, which allows him to rack up a ton of points. Snider is also a standout in football. In his sophomore season this past fall, he rushed for over 1,700 yards and had 24 touchdowns. He also had 125 tackles on defense. Cover, who was a state qualifier all the way down at 170, looks like Snider's toughest challenger. If Snider and Cover are on the same of the bracket at the state tournament, I honestly wouldn't be surprised if anyone in the top 11 toes the line across from Snider on Sunday night.

Gallia is by far the toughest district here with four projected state placers and nine total ranked wrestlers. Wilmington has the least amount of wrestlers ranked above with eight. As I stated at 195, I wouldn't be surprised if we see a few guys move down from 220 to 195. A few other names to watch at Wilmington are Cochran (Kenton Ridge), McKnight (Wilmington), and Larue (Licking Valley).

40. Antonio Saldana (Geneva) Senior – PE9

Neves is the clear favorite here and was also favored to capture the 220 pound state crown last year as well. He pinned top challenger Bever at state duals a couple weeks ago in the second period. He also beat fourth-ranked Huff the next day at their conference tournament, 3-1. I think two-time state qualifier Burress also has the ability to reach the state finals. Neves, Bever, and Burress all exit separate districts, which means two of them will likely be on the same side of the bracket at the state tournament.

Gallia looks very strong at this weight with three projected state placers. Gallia also has the most wrestlers ranked above with 12. Wilmington is also very strong at the top with two of the top four wrestlers. The southwest district does, however, have the least amount of wrestlers ranked with eight. A few other names to watch at Wilmington are Caswell (Bishop Watterson), Weil (Western Brown), and Brooks (Wilmington).

Hermes is favored for the second straight year to capture the lightweight state crown in the small school division. He is currently 44-4 this season and has an outstanding career record of 102-6. As long as he stays healthy, he will definitely be in contention for the state record for career wins in a couple years. The current state record for wins is held by Jordan Cowell (Archbold) with 237. Two-time state qualifier, Judge, and 2019 state qualifier, Shore, look like Hermes' toughest challengers. I haven't seen Judge at 106 yet, but I hear that is the plan for the postseason. Judge's weight choice will definitely be a story line to follow at sectionals. Shore is also another interesting story line to follow this postseason, as she is seeking to become the first female state placer in the Boy's Division in Ohio history. At the state tournament in 2019 she became the first female wrestler ever to win a match in the championship bracket. Hermes and Judge both exit Rossford, so they will likely be on opposite sides of the bracket at the state tournament.

Rossford is ridiculously tough at this weight. The northwest district has four projected state placers and seven of the top 11 wrestlers overall. Rossford also has very good depth, leading the way with 14 total ranked wrestlers. Troy has two projected state placers but also has the least amount of wrestlers ranked above (five). A couple other names that will likely be in the mix at the southwest district are Bergman (Versailles) and Jacobs (Brookville).

Campbell is the heavy favorite here and should be a key factor for Legacy Christian in the team race. Campbell is currently rated as the second best overall freshman in Ohio behind Carter Neves (Graham), who is a projected state runner-up at 182 in Division 2. Maynard and Caprella look like the top candidates to meet Campbell in the finals. Maynard and Caprella have split bouts so far this season. Caprella won the first meeting, 8-2, in the finals the LCC Thunderbird Invitational at 113. Maynard then got revenge the following week in the finals at the Ada Invitational, beating Caprella, 4-0, in overtime at 120. Campbell and Caprella both exit Troy, so it's likely that they will be on opposite sides of the bracket at the state tournament. This has been one the deeper and tougher weights all season, so I ultimately wouldn't be surprised at all if anyone ranked in the Top 15 reaches the podium.

Troy looks very strong here with four projected state placers and five wrestlers in the top nine. The southwest district just recently got a little tougher when I found out that Gandhi will be dropping down from 120. Coshocton has zero projected state placers and the least amount of ranked wrestlers above (seven). A few other names to watch there are Natale (Sandy Valley), Traux (Alexander), Welch (Caldwell), and Burgess (Chesapeake).

I went back and forth here with who to pick as the favorite, but I ultimately decided on 2019 state runner-up Shore. Shore has missed quite a bit of action this season, which made the decision even tougher. The 2019 state placer and top challenger, Hahn, has been spectacular so far this season, boasting a blemish-free record of 44-0. I would also consider Cmil a serious title contender. He transferred to South Range from Boardman, where he was D1 sectional champ last year, but unfortunately wasn't able to compete at districts. Shore, Hahn, and Cmil all exit separate districts, so it's likely only two of them are on the same side of the bracket at the state tournament.

Rossford and Troy each have three projected state placers each; Rossford looks like the toughest district overall. Just like 106, seven of the top 11 wrestlers exit the northwest district. The 126 field looks a little more desirable, which could lead to someone moving up a weight class. All four districts have pretty good depth with each having at least nine ranked wrestlers respectively. However, like 113, Coshocton is the only district without a projected state placer at this weight.

This is definitely one of the deeper and more wide open weights in Division 3. Two-time state placer Edwards is the slight favorite to capture his first state crown here. He took third place at 113 in 2018 and third place again at 113 in 2019. Brown looks like the top challenger after beating third-ranked Allen, 6-4, about a month ago in a dual meet. As I stated already, this weight is very deep and very wide open, so I ultimately wouldn't be surprised if anyone in the Top 10 reaches the state finals.

This weight is absolutely stacked at Troy, as five of the top nine wrestlers exit the southwest district. However, the weight does have only seven total ranked wrestlers, which could be due to how undesirable this weight looks at the top. Coshocton has zero projected state placers and the least amount of ranked wrestlers above (six). A handful of other names to keep an eye on there are Samson (West Muskingum), Bender (Caldwell), Puckett (Huntington), Dyke (Zane Trace), and Whitman (Toronto).

Lacure looks like the obvious pick here after beating 2019 state champ and top challenger, Mattin, at state duals, 11-2. I believe Mattin, a Michigan commit, had a 100+ match winning streak heading into the bout with Lacure. Fifth ranked Carmean beat Lacure last year in the district semi-finals. Carmean then lost in the district finals to third ranked Long and also lost this season on injury default to Owens (while trailing), so this weight might be a little more wide open than most people think. With Mattin and Owens exiting Rossford and Lacure, Long, and Carmean all exiting Troy, it's possible that Mattin or Owens could have the tall task of beating three top five ranked guys in the state quarterfinals, semi-finals, and finals.

Rossford looks very, very strong here. The northwest district has four projected state placers and also leads the way with 14 total wrestlers ranked above. The other three districts also have pretty good depth with each having at least seven ranked wrestlers. For the fifth weight in a row, Barnesville has the top wrestler exiting Coshocton. However, for the fourth weight in a row, Coshocton doesn't have a projected state placer.

Barnett is the slight favorite here to capture his second state crown and his first since 2018. He won his first state title all the way down at 106 pounds. Barnett is the all-time career pin leader in OHSAA history with a whopping 157! He has been spectacular this season so far, boasting a 46-1 record. He also has an outstanding career record of 220-11. Barnett's 220 wins puts him currently in third place all-time in OHSAA history, behind Jordan Cowell (Archbold) and Troy Opfer (Sandusky SMCC). Cowell leads with 237 wins, followed by Opfer's 224. It doesn't look like Barnett will be able to catch Cowell, but he should be able to pass Opfer during the district tournament. Barnett's lone loss this season came against two-time Division 2 state runner-up Moore at Fricker's Duals, by a score of 4-1. Barnett was then able to avenge that a loss a few weeks later in a dual meet, beating Moore, 6-4. Hursey and Vanderhorst look like Barnett's toughest challenger and should also be considered serious title contenders. Vanderhorst actually outplaced Barnett at the 2019 state tournament while both were at 113, but they unfortunately never wrestled each other.

Rossford and Troy look very strong at this weight. Both districts have three projected state placers. Rossford does, however, have the better depth of the two. The northwest district has 12 wrestlers ranked above, while Troy has nine. Even though Troy has nine ranked wrestlers, I think a few other names that could be in the mix at the already crowded southwest district are Epperly (Versailles), Burkholder (Lima Bath), and Langdon (Deer Park). Coshocton has two projected state placers, but also has the least amount of ranked wrestlers above (six). A few other names to watch are Moyer (Sandy Valley), Simmons (Adena), Ackley (Caldwell), Frankopouls (Zane Trace), and Christie (Trimble).

The 2018 state champ Brown is heavily favored to capture his second state crown. The future Ohio State Buckeye won it all as a freshman and was favored to do so again last year as well prior to the cancellation of the state tournament. Previous state placer Shephard looks like Brown's toughest challenger here. He was sixth at 132 pounds in 2019. I think returning state qualifier Marshall also has the ability to meet Brown in the state finals. Brown, Shephard, and Marshall all exit separate districts, so it's likely only two of them are on the same side of the bracket at the state tournament.

Troy and Garfield are very strong at this weight with each having three projected state placers. However, Rossford is the deepest district with a whopping 14 total ranked wrestlers. Coshocton has half as many ranked wrestlers as Rossford (seven), which puts them last in that category. Quite a few other names to watch at Coshocton are 2019 state qualifier McFee (West Muskingum), Liukart (Marion Elgin), King (Sandy Valley), Keyt (West Jefferson), Sugar (Columbus Academy), and Hall (Barnesville).

Two-time state qualifier Hurst is the slight favorite to win this weight. His most notable win this season came over three-time Division 2 state qualifier Braun (Graham), 8-6, in a dual meet. Prior to Hurst's big win, two-time state placer Palmer was the number one ranked guy. Palmer has since lost to 2019 Division 2 state placer Muldrew, 9-8. That was Palmer's first and only loss this season so far. Along with Hurst and Palmer, I think Chase is also a serious title contender. He has really improved the last two seasons and looked prime to place very high last year down at 145. Palmer and Chase both exit Coshocton, so it's likely one of them will have Hurst on their side, while the other will have the slightly easier path on the other side.

Coshocton is very strong at the top with three projected state placers. This is actually the only weight at Coshocton where the district has at least three projected state placers. Despite being very strong at the top, Coshocton has the least amount of ranked wrestlers above (six). The other three districts have much better depth with each having at least 10 ranked wrestlers. Coshocton could get a boost if Waggoner (Richmond Edison) is back for the postseason. He has missed quite a bit of action as of late, but I hear he is questionable to return for sectionals. A few other names to watch at Coshocton are Lemaster (Centerburg), Bdoyan (Columbus Academy), Wickline (Westfall), and Brown (Bidwell River Valley).

Northern Illinois commit and 2019 state placer, Pummel, is the slight favorite to win this weight. The future Husky was a slight favorite at this weight last year as well before the tournament was unfortunately canceled. I was really looking forward to watching that weight unfold last year. If Pummel is able to win it all, he would be Indian Lake's second state champ in school history and the first Laker since Dean Jenkins in 1989. I think Havill, Slone, Duvall, and Palmer are all serious challengers. Havill has the most notable win of the bunch this season, beating state title contender Alvarez, 7-4, in a dual meet while up at 170. Pummel and Havill both exit the same sectional and district, so it's likely they they will likely be on opposite sides of the bracket at the state tournament, and it's possible they meet three weekends in a row in the finals.

Garfield is absolutely stacked at this weight with four projected state placers and nine wrestlers in the top 18. Rossford is the deepest district here with a whopping 15 ranked wrestlers. That is tied with the 170 pound weight class at Rossford for the most wrestlers ranked at one weight from a single district in all of Division 3. Coshocton looks like the exact opposite on paper with only four ranked wrestlers. Three of the four, however, are ranked in the Top 10. Quite a few other names that will likely be in the mix at Coshocton are Matheney (Amanda-Clearcreek), Pasma (Marion Elgin), Rickenbacker (West Jefferson), Greene (Bidwell River Valley), Stewart (Zane Trace), and Martin (Westfall).

Like 160, I think this weight looks pretty wide open among the top four ranked wrestlers. Two-time state placer Garza is the slight favorite here after recently beating Lemon, 3-2, at their conference tournament. Lemon had been ranked number one since July prior to that loss. If Garza is able to win it all, he would be Rittman's first state champ in school history. Two-time state qualifier Keckley also looks like a serious title contender. His most notable win came in a dual meet against London, where he narrowly beat 2019 Division 2 state placer Antwaun Burns (London) in overtime. I think Alvarez is sort of a dark horse here. He qualified for the state tournament down at 145 last year, so he sort of lacks head-to-head matches against the top guys at this weight and the surrounding weights. Garza and Lemon both exit the same district, while Keckley and Alvarez exit separate districts, so it's possible the winner of Garza and Lemon gets placed on the opposite side of three top guys in the bracket at the state tournament.

Troy is absolutely stacked here with four projected state placers and six wrestlers ranked in the top 18. As I stated at 160, Rossford has 15 ranked wrestlers, which is tied for the most wrestlers ranked at one weight from a single district in Division 3. Coshocton has the least amount of wrestlers ranked with seven, but all seven are in the Top 30. Coshocton could get a slight boost if David Chapman (Crooksville) wrestles in the postseason. I haven't seen him in any results this season, but he has been ranked most of his career. Chapman's status at sectionals will be something to keep a close eye on.

The 2019 state placer Stewart is the favorite to capture the state crown here. He transferred to Greenon this year from Urbana, where he took 8th at 170 in Division 2 for the Hillclimbers. Stewart has two wins this season over projected state placers at this weight. He has beat sixth ranked Hash, 9-4, and eighth ranked Myers, 7-4. If Stewart is able to capture the state title, he would Greenon's first state champ in school history. I think Stoddard will be Stewart's toughest challenger. He is currently 38-0 with 18 of those wins coming via pin. His most notable wins this year are over fifth ranked Rose (twice) and Division 1 projected state placer Corrigan (Twinsburg). Stewart and Stoddard both exit separate districts, so it's possible they could be on the same of the bracket at the state tournament

This is one of those rare weights where all four districts have two projected state placers each. All four districts also have pretty good depth. Each district has at least five wrestlers ranked in the Top 25 and at least seven total ranked wrestlers. I would tab Garfield as the toughest district overall here. The northeast district has eight wrestlers ranked in the top 21 and 10 in the top 27.

Returning state qualifier Miller is the clear favorite here to capture his first state title. I would have to tab the Appalachian State commit as one of the heavier favorites in all of Ohio. He was up at 220 for their conference tournament, but I'm fairly certain we will see him back down at this weight for the postseason. The future Mountaineer has been perfect so far this season, posting a blemish-free record of 37-0. Knight looks like Miller's toughest challenger after beating third ranked Blair, 7-4, last month in a dual meet at Sandy Valley. Miller, Knight, and Blair all exit separate districts, so there is a chance we see Miller vs Knight in the state semi-finals, rather than the state finals.

Like 160, Garfield is stacked at this weight, with four projected state placers and nine wrestlers ranked in the top 16. Rossford is also very strong here. The northwest district has two projected state placers and leads the way with 13 ranked wrestlers. This definitely looks like one of thinner weights at Troy and could be an attractive destination for possible weight movers. The southwest district has zero projected state placers and only seven wrestlers ranked above. A couple other names to watch at Troy are McKnight (Middletown Madison) and Waller (Mechanicsburg).

Returning state qualifier Kohlhofer is the favorite to win this weight. I think he will be a huge factor for Delta in the team race at the state tournament, as the Panthers try to vie for a Top 3 finish. Undefeated Ryder (31-0, 23 pins) and returning state qualifier Clouse look like Kohlhofer's toughest challengers. Both have previous wins over fourth ranked Kidd. Ryder beat Kidd this season in a dual meet, 8-4, while Clouse beat Kidd last year, 4-3, at the Sandusky SMCC D3 Duals. Kohlhofer, Ryder, and Clouse all exit separate districts, so it's likely only two of them are on the same side of the bracket at the state tournament.

Like most of the upper weights, Garfield looks very strong here. The northeast district has three projected state placers and eight wrestlers ranked in the top 18. Garfield also leads the way with 12 total ranked wrestlers. The other three district also have decent depth with each having at least eight ranked wrestlers respectively. This could definitely be a weight at Troy where he see a few weight movers. The southwest district has zero projected state placers and only one ranked wrestler in the Top 20.

Three-time state qualifier and 2019 state placer, Meyer, is the slight favorite here. If Meyer is able to win it all, he would Columbus Grove's second state champ in school history and the first Bulldog since Kyle Blankemeyer in 1999. Meyer has spent his entire high school career at heavyweight, posting a record of 161-30. Meyer recently beat top challenger Criblez in the finals at the LCC Thunderbird Invitational, 2-1, in overtime. Criblez won their previous meeting a few weeks prior at the Allen East Duals, 3-2. Meyer and Criblez both have two losses so far this season. Each has suffered a loss to one another, as well as projected Division 1 state champ Ethan Green (Fremont Ross) at the Allen East Duals. Meyer and Criblez both exit the same sectional and district, which means it's possible they could meet in the finals three weekends in a row, and it also means they will likely be on opposite sides of the bracket at the state tournament.

I would tab this is as the deepest weight at Garfield, despite not having double digit ranked wrestlers. The northeast district has a whopping seven wrestlers ranked in the top 11! Garfield also has pretty good depth with nine total ranked wrestlers. Quite a few other names that could also be in the mix at the already crowded northeast district are Ice (Wellsville), McCracken (Hanoverton United), Lally (South Range), Avalon (Cardinal), Christine (Conneaut), and Schellenberger (Mogadore). Coshocton has 10 ranked wrestlers above, which is the most by any weight in the district, so I would tab this is as the deepest weight there as well. Like Garfield, Troy has nine total ranked wrestlers above. A couple other names that could be in the mix as well at the southwest district are Brown (Middletown Madison) and Marburger (Brookville). This has been one of the more unpredictable weights all season and with how close matches are at heavyweight, I honestly wouldn't be surprised if anyone in the Top 40 places at the state tournament.
