Introduction

Fans & Readers:

Thank you for coming back another year and reading what is officially the Eighth Annual Boro Fan Almanac. It goes without saying, but this is served as a prediction report. As you may or may not know, I release weekly rankings on my website, borofanohio.net, and have been doing so for the past seven seasons. The first two years I put this together it only covered Division 3, but the past four years I have moved to both Division 1 and Division 2 as well. When reading the report, please remember that I have not seen every result. Also, when reading the report, keep in mind that head- to- head results do count, but the overall rankings are amongst “the field” and not focused on one particular head-to-head win/loss. I hope that you guys enjoy reading this as much as I do in putting it together. Thank you for the continuous support and attention that you guys show for The Almanac and website year in and year out, it means a lot. Remember to follow me on Twitter @BoroFan_OH_WRST. I would also like to give a special thanks to my good friend and editor, Dominic Petrella. It seems as though we are getting ready to witness another great postseason in OHSAA Wrestling. Hope everyone enjoys!

Yours in Wrestling,

Billy Schaefer

I still am not 100 percent sure that Shupp will be down at 106, but moving down here would be very beneficial for the senior. Shupp, a Central Michigan commit and two-time state placer, beat Agin last year in ultimate-tiebreaker overtime to reach the state finals. Agin and Moon seem to be Shupp's toughest challengers. Agin beat Moon at Ironman, 4-2, in the consolation bracket. Agin ended up finishing in third place, while Moon took sixth place.

Fairmont and Perrysburg are the strongest districts at this weight. Fairmont has four projected state placers, but sort of lacks depth after that. Perrysburg definitely has the best overall depth, with four wrestlers in the Top 10 and 12 in the top 26. Hoover looks like the weakest district at this weight and 113, but I think the top three all have the ability to reach the podium in Columbus. Rocha could be a sleeper there after recently cutting down to 106, where he pinned White at their conference tournament. Lewarchik seems to be improving each week. He recently beat Najdusak in a dual meet, but did lose early in the year to Roberts. Heil could be a sleeper at this weight after beating Shaw a month ago; he then lost to Sexton the following week, so Heil can be up and down at times it seems.

Byrd seems to be the slight favorite here after recently beating Shawver, 4-3, this past weekend in Columbus. Also, at Ironman, Shawver lost in the round-of-12 to Ramos (Illinois), 8-2; Byrd then beat Ramos in the very next round, 7-2. Byrd also pinned Richter at Ironman. Byrd, an early Maryland Terrapin commit and two-time state placer, finished 3rd last year after losing in the semi-finals to Julian Tagg.

Perrysburg is the toughest district at this weight, with three of the top four wrestlers and four projected placers. Fairmont is also pretty strong, with three projected placers and nine in the Top 20. Hoover and Darby seem to be the weaker districts here, with each having only three wrestlers in the Top 20. The strength at Hoover is also dependent on Sampsel and if he is able to make it back for the post-season. Sampsel was around #5 most of the season, but since he hasn't wrestled, I moved him outside of the Top 8.

- Projected Champion: Julian Tagg (Brecksville) Sophomore – PB1
2. Brendon Fenton (Elyria) Senior – PB2
 3. Logan Heil (Brunswick) Junior – NCH1
 4. Jake Canitano (Solon) Junior – NCH2
 5. Angelo Rini (St. Edward) Junior – PB3
 6. Micah Dusseau (Hilliard Davidson) Senior – HD1
 7. Cameron Baird (Harrison) Junior – KF1
 8. Antoine Allen (LaSalle) Sophomore – KF2
 9. Mason Kleinberg (Springboro) Sophomore – KF3
 10. Logan Hoskins (Vandalia Butler) Sophomore – KF4
 11. Jedidah Marlow (Western Brown) Junior – KF5
 12. Ricardo Oviedo (Perrysburg) Sophomore – PB4
 13. Lucas Seibert (Westerville North) Senior – HD2
 14. Dante DiTullio (Mason) Sophomore - KF6
 15. Landon Hacker (Wadsworth) Freshman – NCH3
 16. Zak Anderson (Midview) Junior – PB5
 17. Jared Dressler (Medina) Senior – NCH4
 18. Kyle Maville (Oregon Clay) Junior – PB6
 19. Matthew Whipkey (St. Ignatius) Junior – PB7
 20. Cristian Chavez (Lakota East) Junior – KF7
 21. Jimmy Bostic (Massillon Jackson) Sophomore – NCH5
 22. Zach Wiseman (Stow) Freshman – NCH6
 23. Liam Morrison (Findlay) Senior – PB8
 24. Hunter Leapley (Central Crossing) Junior – HD3
 25. Tommy Ungrady (Mayfield) Freshman – NCH7
 26. Brandon Callow (Twinsburg) Senior – NCH8
 27. Mitchell Coultas (Licking Hts.) Junior – HD4
 28. Chase Henderson (Walsh Jesuit) Freshman – NCH9
 29. Joseph Eckelberry (Tri- Valley) Freshman – HD5
 30. Carter Smith (Fremont Ross) Junior – PB9
 31. Luke Blaine (Olentangy Liberty) Senior – HD6
 32. Devante Cooper (Dublin Coffman) Sophomore – HD7
 33. Caden Wendling (Berea-Midpark) Sophomore – PB10
 34. Oscar Rocha (Painesville Riverside) Junior – NCH10
 35. Joe Graf (Hudson) Senior – NCH11
 36. Matt Furman (Parma) Senior – PB11
 37. Lincoln Splete (Mentor) Freshman – NCH12
 38. Adam Lough (Amherst Steele) Junior – PB12
 39. Alec Negron (Avon Lake) Junior – PB13

The match between Tagg and Fenton should definitely be one the most anticipated matches in Columbus, although we could see it the week before at Perrysburg. Tagg won the 106 crown last year as a freshman, while Fenton has won two state titles himself. Tagg has had the better season thus far, which is ultimately why I went with him, but Fenton seems to wrestle the best at The Schott. Tagg, Fenton, and Heil all meet seeding criteria. It's likely that Heil will be on the same side of Tagg/Fenton district loser, assuming Heil wins his district – Heil beat Canitano opening weekend, 4-3.

I would say Perrysburg has the best top-end strength here, but Fairmont is also very deep. The top five here are all from Northeast Ohio. This should be one of the best weights to watch unfold at Fairmont, as there are five wrestlers in the top 11. DiTullio could also be in the mix after beating Marlow, but he then lost to Chavez. I hear that McGuire (Miamisburg) is no longer wrestling, but if he does come back, he would be around #20 or so. I am not really sure if Ungrady will be here, at 126, or not wrestling at all. He has not been in the lineup lately and I don't think he has made 120 yet, but 120 is the much better option at Hoover. Darby seems to be the weakest district at this weight, with only one projected placer and two wrestlers in the Top 20.

Projected Champion: Mick Burnett (Elyria) Sophomore – PB1

2. Gio DiSabato (Hilliard Davidson) Senior – HD1
3. Gus Sutton (Austintown Fitch) Junior – NCH1
4. Bryce Hepner (St. Edward) Sophomore – PB2
5. Jimmy Carmany (Brecksville) Sophomore – PB3
6. Jabari Thomas (Fairfield) Junior – KF1
7. Micah Norwood (Lancaster) Freshman – HD2
8. Jordan Rosselli (Olentangy Liberty) Senior – HD3
9. Nick Nastasi (Kenston) Sophomore – NCH2
10. Casey Wiles (LaSalle) Freshman – KF2
11. Jack Collins (Elder) Sophomore – KF3
12. Kyle Gruber (Massillon Perry) Senior – NCH3
13. D.J. Huff (St. Ignatius) Junior – PB4
14. Alec Bailey (Green) Senior – NCH4
15. Derek Fields (Brunswick) Freshman – NCH5
16. Charles Chapman (Fremont Ross) Junior – PB5
17. Dylan Waugh (Mason) Senior – KF4
18. Bailey Suddeth (Vandalia Butler) Junior – KF5
19. Will Harris (Tri- Valley) Senior – HD4
20. Joe Pascale (Troy) Senior – KF6
21. Khalil Brown (Lorain) Senior – PB6
22. Tanner Donathan (Western Brown) Junior – KF7

23. Michael Kelley (Barberton) Sophomore – NCH6

33. Nate Barrett (Madison Comprehensive) Freshman - PB10
34. Jacob Dunstan (North Ridgeville) Junior – PB11
35. Zach Evans (N. Canton Hoover) Freshman – NCH10
36. Raymier Hickerson (Cleveland Hts.) Senior – NCH11
37. Tristan Hostetter (Piqua) Senior – KF10
38. Jonah Smith (Findlay) Sophomore – PB12
39. Tristan McKenzie (Archbishop Moeller) Sophomore – KF11
40. Josh Futo (Uniontown Lake) Sophomore – NCH12

This seems to be one of the more wide open weights in Division 1. Burnett and DiSabato met in the 3rd/4th place match at Brecksville, a close match that was won by Burnett. Burnett was a state semi-finalist last year, before finishing in sixth place. DiSabato, an Ohio Bobcat commit and three-time state placer, reached the state finals last year, but lost a close match to Fenton, 5-4. I think Sutton and Hepner could also be in the mix. Both had great runs last year in Columbus. They met over the summer in freestyle, a match won by Sutton; that was my tiebreaker when deciding who to put in the #3 spot. Sutton beat projected state champ Schuster in the first round and reached the semi-finals before finishing in sixth place. Hepner's great run last year started at districts where he beat Shawver, which caused him to get a great draw. He took advantage of that great draw and reached the state finals before finishing as a state runner-up. Rosselli is also another one who seems to wrestle very well at The Schott. I am not sure if he will be here or at 120, but he seems to be wrestling better at 126 as of late. DiSabato and Hepner are the only wrestlers that meet seeding criteria if they win their respective district.

I have been saying this all year, but D1-126 is the deepest weight overall in the state. It also seems that the weight's depth is almost evenly dispersed amongst the districts. Perrysburg is obviously the strongest at the top, with three in the top five, but each district has two wrestlers in the Top 10 and four in the Top 20. The fourth spot at Perrysburg looks wide open if Huff is not wrestling. Huff has been in and out of the lineup and I am also not sure if he will be here or at 132. Ellis (Toledo Whitmer) is another name to watch at Perrysburg. Darby seems to be the weakest when looking at the overall depth, especially if Rosselli is down at 120. Another thing to note is that Harris has recently been back wrestling, but I hear that he could be anywhere between 120 and 132. Since Darby only has five wrestlers listed above, a few other names to watch are: Barnes (Delaware Hayes), Richards (Hilliard Darby), Torio (Olentangy Orange), Fulwider (Watkins Memorial), and Colvin (St. Charles).

 35. Jacob Boulton (Springboro) Senior – KF10
 36. Ryan Fahy (Central Crossing) Senior – HD9
 37. Evan Overholser (Kettering Fairmont) Sophomore – KF11

38. Max Ludin (Solon) Senior – NCH8
39. Jimmy Brenneman (Nordonia) Senior – NCH9
40. Jake Bryson (Medina Highland) Sophomore – NCH10

This seems to be a four-man race and should be one of the better weights to watch unfold in Columbus. I like Fields, a NC State commit, slightly above the other three mostly based on his state finals experience. He was a state won the state crown last year, a year after falling in the state finals. Fields, Breeding, Tagg and Kazimir have all wrestled each other. At Ironman, Kazimir beat Tagg, Fields beat Kazimir, and then Tagg beat Fields for 7th place. Breeding then beat Tagg at Brecksville. Tagg avenged his loss to Kazimir this past weekend. Fields and Tagg both meet seeding criteria. If both do win their district, it would likely put Tagg on the opposite side of the other three main contenders.

Perrysburg is obviously the strongest district here, with what I consider three state title contenders. Fairmont is also very strong here with four wrestlers in the Top 10. Fairmont may have the best depth, with eight wrestlers in the top 17. Another thing to follow at Hoover is whether Jones (Shaker) and Brichford (Madison) are here or at 126. Both have made 126, but 132 may be the better option. Brichford has a head-to-head win over Boysel at Kenston. Jones then beat Brichford in the finals, 5-1. I listed Brichford at 126 and Jones at 132. I would have to tab Darby as the weakest district since they don't have a projected placer, but the district still has decent depth, with nine in the top 36.

39. Justin Swavely (Grove City) Junior – HD4

I went back and forth on who to pick for the top spot. Heard had a great Ironman, where he beat Baughman for third place. Heard outplaced Andonian there, which is ultimately why I chose him. It's tough to peg the LaSalle wrestlers since they don't wrestle at any of the big holiday tournaments in Ohio. Anyone that knows me knows that I'm a huge Andonian fan. I LOVE his exciting style and the way he racks up points. Andonian has been wrestling very well since Ironman. He beat Stickley by major decision in their first dual meet, but I heard that Stickley was badly injured. Andonian just lost to Stickley this past weekend in Columbus, 10-9 (I hear Stickley is almost back to full health). Andonian beat Regalbutto by major decision in Columbus and also beat Baughman a couple weeks ago, 9-2.

Perrysburg is very strong at the top, with three wrestlers in the top five, and has very good depth as well, with seven in the top 13 and 11 in the top 27. Fairmont is also very strong, with three projected state placers. The depth at Fairmont is sort of contingent on where Mullins and Lipps end up. Mullins was at 145 this past weekend, so I listed him there. I have heard rumors that Lipps could swap weights with teammate Klaserner. Darby is by far the weakest district at this weight, with only four wrestlers listed above. I would suggest for anyone listed at 132 and 145 at Darby to consider moving here. Several other names to watch at Darby are: Williams (Teays Valley), Droesch (Watkins Memorial), Ellison (Hilliard Bradley), Foster (Big Walnut), Jones (Hilliard Davidson), and Gonzalez (Dublin Coffman). Ellison is a returning a returning state qualifier.

This should be another fun weight to watch unfold in Columbus. Like 132, this looks to be a four-man race, but Heard did beat Donathan at last year's state tournament, so this could essentially be a five-man race. Donathan just recently beat Dover this past weekend in Columbus, a repeat result from last year's state duals. Dover has a couple close wins over Voinovich and has beaten North a couple times by a little wider margin. Voinovich leads North 2-1 in their current season series. Dover and North meet seeding criteria if both win their district. That COULD result in Dover being placed on the opposite side of Donathan, North, and Voinovich.

Perrysburg is probably the strongest district at this weight, with three projected placers and six in the top 16. This is definitely one of the tougher weights at Darby, as I project the district to have three state placers. The Fairmont district seems to have many possible movers between 138 and 152. Like I mentioned at 138, Lipps and Mullins could be here or at 138. I would say Hoover is probably the weakest at this weight. I have heard rumors that Linder could be up at 152 and that Holloway might be out for the season. If neither are at this weight, I would highly suggest some movers. Apsago (Kenston) upset Nolan in the semi-finals at their conference tournament before losing to Magda (Madison) in the finals; both guys are definitely names to watch at Hoover. Another name to also watch there is French (Painesville Riverside).

Carr, an Iowa State commit, is the obvious favorite here, as he looks to become a four-time Ohio state champion. Carr is the defending state champ at this weight and will try to become the 31st wrestler in Ohio history to accomplish the amazing feat (Assuming Hoskins and Moore become the 29th and 30th). Carr would technically become a five-time state champ, if you add in his state from 8th grade in Kentucky. Connor Brady, who many considered Carr's toughest, is unfortunately out for the season due to injury. Carr beat Brady, 9-4, a couple weeks. Brady actually suffered the injury during his match with Carr; a match Brady led 4-1 until right before the end of the second period. Muhammed and Marsh seem to be on the next tier at this weight. Muhammed sat out the first half of the year due to transferring. Muhammed and Marsh met at Super 32, a match won by Muhammed. Marsh started the season off with a huge win over Ryan Thomas (Graham) at 160 in a dual meet. I heard Thomas was coming off of injury/sickness, which might explain the surprising the result. Nonetheless, it's a great win for Marsh, as Thomas is ranked as high as #2 by a few national publications. Marsh will look to rebound from last year's state tournament, where he went 1-2.

Fairmont looks like the toughest district at this weight, with two projected state placers and five wrestlers in the Top 15. This weight looked even tougher at Fairmont until earlier this week, when I found out that projected state placer McIntosh (Harrison) will not be wrestling at sectionals due to injury. Fairmont, Hoover and Perrysburg are all pretty balanced after that, as each have five wrestlers in the Top 20. A thing to watch at Hoover is what weight Farenchak ends up at. He could be here or at 160. I listed him here because he would be a little lower at 160, especially now that Brady and McIntosh are likely out. Darby looks to be the weakest here. I see that fourth and final spot as being wide open, which sort of seems common at Darby. Another name to watch there is Barker (Grove City).

Projected Champion: Jaden Mattox (Central Crossing) Senior – HD1

Mattox seemed like the obvious favorite here, but his loss to Murphy last week proves that anyone can lose on any given day. Murphy pinned Mattox in the first period a couple weeks ago. Mattox, a future Ohio State Buckeye, is a three-time state finalist, capturing the state crown as a sophomore. Mattox could technically wrestle the second, third, and fourth wrestlers in the quarterfinals, semi-finals and finals, which would make for an amazing feat.

Fairmont is probably the toughest at the top and when looking at the overall depth. Fairmont has three projected placers and seven wrestlers in the Top 15. This seems to definitely be one of the weaker weights at Perrysburg, as I have only one projected placer exiting there. Hightower could be a wildcard out the Perrysburg district. He has a notable win over Murphy at Ironman, but he did just recently lose to Adewumi this past weekend in the Columbus. Darby doesn't have great overall depth, but the district has two projected placers.

Kharchla recently became the top man here after beating Soehnlén in a dual meet, 3-1. Kharchla has yet to compete in the post-season, which almost made me switch my pick to Soehnlén. Soehnlén, a Purdue commit, is the returning state champion at this weight. Beachem, a returning state placer, seems to have the best chance of knocking off either Kharchla or Soehnlén. Soehnlén and Beachem meet seeding criteria. Kharchla obviously does not meet seeding criteria and could possibly be on the same side as Soehnlén.

Hoover and Fairmont are the strongest districts at this weight, with both having three projected placers each. Fairmont has the best overall depth, with seven wrestlers in the top 16 and 10 wrestlers in the top 25. Perrysburg seems to be the weakest district at this weight, which is sort of rare for that district. The lighter weights are much tougher at Perrysburg compared to the upper weights. I think we could see a mover or two from 160 at Perrysburg. Nagy just recently cut down from 195, a move that seems very beneficial. I am not 100% sure who will man 170 and 182 for St. Edward. I think whoever is at 170 has a better chance of qualifying compared to 182. It sounds like Zakaib and Garcar will wrestle-off for the spot at 170 and that Lisco will man the spot at 182. Since Darby has only six wrestlers listed above, a few other names that could be in the mix are Sutander (Delaware Hayes), Soghomonyan (Upper Arlington) and Ackley (New Albany).

Marcelli, a future Cleveland State Viking, pinned Lawson in the consolation bracket at Ironman. Marcelli missed most of last season due to injury, but was able to return in February. Marcelli didn’t look the same last year in his abbreviated season, but he did reach the state semi-finals before ultimately finishing in sixth place. Lawson, a two-time state placer and two-time state runner-up Baughman should be Marcelli’s toughest challengers. Baughman who was named football's Mr. Ohio in the fall. He had a late start to the season, as waited to start wrestling after he committed to Elon for football. That was a surprising move since he was originally committed to wrestle at Virginia. Lawson beat Baughman, 3-0, a few weeks ago at Wadsworth. Lawson and Baughman are the only two wrestlers who meet seeding criteria.

This weight and 170 are both very strong at Hoover. I would say this is the toughest weight, as Hoover has four projected state placers. Another name to watch at Hoover is Murphy (Dover). He suffered an injury earlier in the year, but I heard there was a chance he could be back for sectionals. The Fairmont district is also pretty strong, with three wrestlers in the Top 10. Perrysburg might be the weakest up top, while Darby looks to have worst overall depth when looking past their projected qualifiers. Bien is a name to follow at Darby, as he has been at both 182 and 195 this year. Bien would be ranked a little lower overall, but I think it could improve his chances for qualification, as I think 195 is more wide open than 182. If Bien is at 195, Goldsmith would be at 182 for Westerville North; I think he could be a factor at Darby as well.

I see this weight, like many others, as ultimately a three-man race. Ball, a Tennessee-Chattanooga commit, missed the first half of the season due to an injury at Ironman. Ball and Thompson both lost last year in Columbus to eventual state champ Brown (Elyria). Ball lost to Brown in the semi-finals, while Thompson fell to Brown in the state finals match. Ball finished in third place last year for the second year in a row. Howard and Thompson have state finals experience, as both are returning state runners-up; that could be something to keep in mind. Howard, a future Virginia Tech Hokie, fell in last year's state finals to Perrine (Nordon). Ball, Howard, and Thompson all meet seeding criteria. If all three win their district that would put two on the same side and one on the other side. If Thompson, the Air Force commit, is the one to avoid Ball and Howard, he would also avoid Baker and put him away from the other three wrestlers in the top four.

This weight looks very evenly dispersed, with each district having two projected state placers; this is the only weight like that in Division 1. I would say Fairmont is definitely the strongest district at this weight, with six wrestlers in the top 12 and nine in the top 21. Darby looks to be the weakest district when looking at overall depth. The depth was hurt by Garren's recent move to 220, but the depth could be boosted if Bien (Westerville North) is up here at 195. Like I mentioned at 182, Bien could be at 182 or 195; his teammate Goldsmith would man the opposite weight.

Cochran, a returning state placer and currently undefeated, seems to be the clear favorite here. Although I think Cochran is the clear favorite, I definitely see him being challenged, even though he beat McCloud earlier in the season, 8-2. Cochran finished fourth last year after losing to Howard (St. Edward) in the semi-finals. I heard about a month ago that Howard was thinking of moving to 220 because of his head-to-win over Cochran, but it seems Howard has decided to stay down at 195. Bever seems to be wrestling very well right now and has been climbing up the rankings recently after beating Boyle (Rootstown) and Stein (Canfield) in the past month. Meaney could also be a sleeper at this weight. To my knowledge he has four losses on the season, but all four losses are to projected state champs. He has lost three times to returning Division 3 state champ Willis and once to projected Division 2 state champ Stein (Canfield).

Fairmont is obviously the strongest district here. I don't really like putting five wrestlers from the same district in the top eight, but the five at Fairmont are just too strong. Hankins seems to be the odd man out after recently losing to Sauerwein in a dual, 9-5, but I see results flip all the time. Whoever finishes fourth at Fairmont should be hoping they draw the Darby winner, as Darby is clearly the weakest district here. I have zero projected state placers, although I think whoever wins the Darby district will have a good chance at placing as long as they don't draw the fourth place finisher from Fairmont. Garren's move here could end up being very beneficial. I believe Enzenekwe (Olentangy Liberty) made the move from 195 to 220 last season and ended up placing fourth in the state; maybe Garren can follow that plan. Since Darby only has five wrestlers listed above, a couple other names to watch are Hoskinson (Dublin Coffman) and Robinson (Delaware Hayes).

Earnest, a future Ohio Bobcat, seems to be the clear favorite here. I would probably tab Earnest as the best heavyweight amongst all the divisions. He doesn't hang on and push like most heavyweights and have matches end 3-2. He can put up points and has over 30 pins this season. Earnest was very undersized last year, but it seems he has added a little weight to his frame. To my knowledge, Earnest's only loss is to nationally ranked Colton Schultz (Colorado), 5-3. Schultz is ranked #2 in most national publications.

I would say Fairmont is the toughest at the top, with three projected state placers. The Fairmont district looked even tougher about a month ago, but Charette (Centerville) got injured. He was a projected state placer at the time. I have heard rumors that he may try to wrestle at sectionals, but due to the severity of his injury I didn't list him above. As for the deepest district, I would give Perrysburg the nod slightly over Hoover. Perrysburg has nine wrestlers in top 26, while Hoover has 13 wrestlers in the top 35. Chappetta is a name to track there. He has been at 220 and 285, but seems to do better at 285. He has a notable win over Bucknavich, but then lost the following week to Ragan. Darby has two projected state placers, but lacks good overall depth. Since Darby has only six wrestlers listed above, a couple other names to watch there are Gaylord (Westerville North) and Feng (Dublin Coffman).

Decatur, a returning state champ, is the obvious favorite here. The future Ohio State Buckeye is currently undefeated and ranked #1 by most national publications. We may be talking about Decatur being a four-time state champ, but unfortunately he was hampered by a knee injury his freshman year. I see Kellar or Burgdorf as next best here. Kellar is hard to peg, as Warren doesn't wrestle in any of the bigger tournaments. He did enter Ironman, but he didn't wrestle any notable Ohio wrestlers. Burgdorf had a nice run last year in Columbus. He lost his first match, but then wrestled all the way back to finish in fourth place.

Alliance is very strong at this weight, with four projected state placers and six wrestlers in the top 12. Wilmington is definitely the weakest district at this weight, but the district usually struggles with depth at most weights. Ream will be cutting down to 106 for his conference tournament and that should help add a little depth to the southwest district. Since Wilmington only has five wrestlers listed above, a couple other names to watch are Hargrove (Aiken), Holzschuh (Logan Elm) and Breaker (Hamilton Ross).

I was hoping we would see Wayt vs Jordan at the GMWVA tournament, but unfortunately Wayt didn't wrestle. Wayt beat Jordan last year in the state quarterfinals, 6-4. Wayt then lost in the semi-finals to McComas. Wayt has avenged that loss twice this year, even beating McComas by major decision in the first match. I see Ironman-placer Jordan as Wayt's toughest challenger, but I think Ritter and McComas could also be title contenders. If McComas and Jordan win their district, then they would meet seeding criteria.

Alliance and Claymont seem to be the toughest at the top. Alliance has four wrestlers in the Top 10, but only two placers, while Claymont has three projected placers. Alliance's depth could be boosted if Neff (Streetsboro) can make it back from injury. He was ranked in the Top 10 before the injury, but I hear it's unlikely he will be fully healthy if he does in fact make it back. Another name to watch at Alliance is Barber (Canfield). Claymont has the best depth overall here too, with seven in the top 19. Wilmington and Norwalk are the weakest districts at this weight. Wilmington has only four wrestlers listed above, so a few other names to watch there are Moll (Westfall), Smart (Wilmington), Bruns (Hamilton Ross), and Rau (Dayton C-J). Moll has been up at 120 in all of the results I have seen, but 113 is the better option.

- Projected Champion: Matthew Cardello (CVCA) Senior – AL1
2. Alek Martin (Graham) Freshman – WI1
 3. Nate Keaton (Circleville) Senior – WI2
 4. Dominic Carone (Streetsboro) Senior – AL2

 39. Aston Shepherd (Upper Sandusky) Sophomore – NO8
 40. Jordan Holt (Sandusky Perkins) Junior – NO9

This should be one of the more exciting weights to watch unfold in Columbus. Keaton is a returning state champ and beat Cardello and Carone along the way, but he took a surprising loss to Muzykoski earlier in the season. Keaton was able to avenge that loss to Muzykoski later in the tournament. I went with Cardello, a Navy commit, as my pick here, but I ultimately see this weight being wide open. Cardello, Keaton, and Carone all meet seeding criteria. It seems likely that both sides of the bracket will each have two of the four top contenders.

Alliance is the strongest district here. The northeast district has four projected placers and eight wrestlers in the top 16. I think we see a couple movers from 120 to 126. Another name to watch at Alliance is Harrison (Akron Springfield). This is definitely one of the tougher weights at Wilmington, with three of the top six projected state placers. I hear Harkins (Norwood) has decided to move back up to 126, a move that I think many should consider themselves at Wilmington. Like 113, this is another wide open weight at Norwalk.

This should be an interesting weight to follow at sectionals, in terms of seeing who moves down from 132 or possibly up from 120. If Decatur is up at 132, I think this becomes a “collection weight.” I see this weight being essentially wide open, but I slightly favor the Kent State commit Brooks. I think Massey and Fogle are his toughest challengers, but I also wouldn’t be surprised if anyone in the top five wins it all. Ray just recently beat McCrone, 10-8, and seems to be very dangerous. He has been down at 120 at times, but I hear he will man 126 for the Indians.

Alliance and Claymont are both very strong at the top, with each having three projected state placers. Like I mentioned at 120, anyone at Alliance should consider moving here, as I see the fourth spot being wide open. Norwalk’s depth could take a hit, as I hear returning state qualifier Branson could be out for the post-season due to injury. I wouldn’t be surprised if we see possible movers from 120 or droppers from 132 at Wilmington. I think Bennett (Logan Elm) could be a kid we see move down here. A few other names to watch at the southwest district are Hoselton (Zane Trace), Randle (Trotwood-Madison), and Grim (Urbana).

 38. Elijah Hunter (Sandusky) Freshman – NO7

Many thought we could see Decatur vs Crace in Columbus, but that unfortunately isn't going to happen. Since then, Crace has left Graham and Decatur has decided to move to 132. Decatur could possibly be going for his third straight state title, if it were not for a violation of rules at weigh-ins his freshman year. The future Ohio State Buckeye beat Kosco (Canal Fulton NW) last year in the state finals after losing to him in their two prior meetings. It is important to note that Decatur and Yackee meet seeding criteria.

Alliance looks like the toughest district once again, with three projected placers and four wrestlers in the top nine. Wilmington has very good depth, despite having only one projected placer. I think we could see Bennett or possibly others drop to 126 at Wilmington. Norwalk and Claymont are both strong up top with two projected state placers each, but both districts lack overall depth.

Projected Champion: J.D. Stickley (Graham) Senior – WI1

2. Andy Garr (Aurora) Junior – AL1
3. Luke Wymer (Akron SVSM) Senior – AL2

39. Evan Hertel (Minerva) Junior – CM9
40. Trevor Lewis (Unioto) Senior – WI10

Stickley, the defending state champ at this weight, won Ironman and looked absolutely outstanding in doing so. He beat projected Division 1 state champ Heard in the semi-finals, 3-1. Stickley then loss to Andonian a month later in a dual by major decision; I heard that Stickley was sick/injured. He then avenged that loss this past weekend in Columbus, winning 10-9 over Andonian. As long as Stickley is healthy, I think he could one the biggest favorites overall in Ohio based on his Ironman performance. Garr looks to be Stickley's toughest challenger after recently beating Regalbuto (Brecksville), 3-2, a couple weeks ago at his conference tournament.

This is definitely one of the tougher weights at Norwalk. The northwest district has three projected placers and 10 wrestlers in the Top 24. A couple other names to watch there are Minnick (Tiffin Columbian) and Corapi (Bellevue). This may be one of the weaker weights at Alliance. Alliance's depth could depend on which Curry shows up the final two weekends. He has some very good wins, but seems to struggle in mid-week duals. Curry has a couple of "surprise losses" to Kennedy and Newbold. Another name to watch at Alliance is Bubonic (Perry). Wilmington looks to be weak up top, with only one projected placer, but I think the district has pretty good depth compared to a lot of other weights there. A couple other names to watch are Gibbs (Clinton-Massie) and Hill (Goshen).

- Projected Champion: Mitch Moore (Graham) Senior – WI1
2. Ben Pasiuk (Carrollton) Junior – CM1
 3. Timothy Grunden (Wauseon) Senior – NO1
 4. Jax Leonard (Louisville) Sophomore – AL1

 40. Colt Hanson (Morgan) Senior – CM10

Moore is the obvious favorite here, as he looks to become Ohio's 30th four-time state champion (Assuming Hoskins becomes the 29th). The future Virginia Tech Hokie has taken quite a few losses this year. He finished eighth at Ironman, where he suffered three losses. He also has recent losses to North (Wadsworth) and Dover (St. Edward). The loss to Dover was this past weekend in Columbus and ended in bizarre fashion. Dover received two penalty points in the finals seconds to beat Moore by a score of 4-3. I think one point was for locking hands and one was for stalling, but I'm not 100% sure. Moore has more losses this year (5), than he had in his first three high school seasons combined (4). Returning state runner-ups Pasiuk and Grunden seem to be Moore's biggest challengers. Moore, Pasiuk, and Grunden all meet seeding criteria.

Alliance, Claymont, and Wilmington are all very strong at this weight. Alliance is probably the toughest at the top with three placers, but all three districts are about even when looking at overall depth. Norwalk is by far the weakest of the four districts here. I wouldn't be surprised if we see someone drop from 152 to 145 at Norwalk, as 152 seems a little more crowded.

36. Ian Weiland (Revere) Senior – AL12
37. Alex Mathis (Cleveland C.C.) Sophomore – NO9
38. Cain Bentz (Lima Shawnee) Senior – NO10

Ramirez, a future NDC Falcon, is my pick here after beating Hubbard in last year's state semi-final, 1-0. Ramirez was a state runner-up, falling in the finals to Freeman. The top four here were all at the same weight last year (145). The top four actually finished 2nd-5th last year in Columbus. I think Hubbard is Ramirez' toughest challenger. He has a nice win over two-time state runner-up Pasiuk (Carrollton) earlier in the season. Ramirez and Hubbard both meet seeding criteria.

Claymont is the strongest at the top with four projected state placers, but Alliance is the deepest district. Alliance has four wrestlers in the Top 10 and nine wrestlers in the Top 20. Wilmington looks like the weakest district here, with only one wrestler in the Top 20 and six total wrestlers listed above. Another name to watch there is Finch (Springfield Shawnee).

Thomas vs Freeman should be one of the most anticipated matches not only in Division 2, but across all three divisions. Thomas, a Minnesota commit, is the defending state champ at this weight, while Freeman is a two-time state champ. Thomas had a “surprise loss” opening weekend to Marsh (Marysville). Like I stated at D1-152, I heard that Thomas was coming off of a sickness/injury, which prevented him from practicing the week prior to the match. Obviously Thomas and Freeman both meet seeding criteria.

Alliance is definitely the toughest district at this weight. Alliance has four projected state placers, six wrestlers in the top 10 and eight in the top 14. Norwalk also has great depth, with 11 wrestlers in the top 28. Once again, I would tab Wilmington as the weakest district, but Claymont isn’t very strong either. Claymont’s depth could be boosted if McGee (Maysville) decides on 160, rather than 170 where I have him listed. McGee has made 160, but I personally think 170 is the better option due to his recent win over Setliff.

- Projected Champion: Rocky Jordan (Graham) Senior – W11

Jordan, the future Ohio State Buckeye, is the obvious pick here. Jordan, a three-time state finalist and two-time state champ, won an Ironman title and is currently undefeated on the season. Eyler seems to be Jordan's toughest challenger after beating D'Alesio, 8-3, this past weekend in Columbus. Many have questioned Eyler's decision to go 170, but I hear he wants to wrestle Jordan. Both Jordan and Eyler meet seeding criteria.

Alliance is the toughest district at this weight, with four projected state placers and eight wrestlers in the top 14. The northeast district looked even more crowded until this past weekend, when I found out Hank Carey (Streetsboro) will not be wrestling in the post-season due to injury/sickness. At Claymont, this weight is much tougher than 182, so I wouldn't be surprised if we see one or two wrestlers move up. Wilmington is the weakest district, with Jordan being the only wrestler in the Top 20. I wouldn't be surprised if we see a few movers to this weight in the southwest. Wilmington only has five wrestlers listed above, so a couple other names to watch there are Wilkin (Hillsboro) and Waters (Greenfield McClain).

The favorite here is Crawford, who is seeking his second state title. The Pitt Commit is a returning state champ and three-time state placer. Crawford beat Heath, 3-2, in last year's district final. Johnson could also be in the mix, but he has missed a ton of time this season. A sleeper here could be Clark. He is currently undefeated and has not surrendered a takedown yet this season. Crawford, Heath, and Johnson all meet seeding criteria, but all three exit the same district, so that is essentially irrelevant. This has been one of the deeper weights in Division 2 all year, so I wouldn't be surprised if anyone in the Top 25 reaches the podium.

Alliance is obviously the toughest, with the district occupying the top three spots. Norwalk isn't very strong up top, but has the best overall depth. The northwest district has seven wrestlers in the top 18 and 12 wrestlers in the top 33. Vega, a returning state alternate, has missed most of the season due to injury, but I hear there is a chance he returns for sectionals. Claymont is pretty tough up top, with three wrestlers in the Top 10, but then lacks overall depth. I think we could see movers from 170 or 195. I think one possible mover could be Harper (Philo), who has been up at 182 lately.

I went back and forth on who to pick here. Even though Day beat Braun, 5-4, early in the year, I have decided to go against the result here. Braun, a returning state runner-up and two-time state placer, will likely see Day at sectionals, districts, and states, which is pretty similar to what we saw last year with Sarver and Day. I feel with how many times they will see each other before the state tournament, that Coach Jordan will make the proper adjustments, just like last year with Sarver. Braun beat Day in two very close matches two years ago, one which was at the state tournament in the consolation bracket. Day and Braun could meet many more times in the future, as both have committed to MAC schools. Day committed to Kent State, while Braun has committed to Northern Illinois. Braun and Day are the only wrestlers that meet seeding criteria.

This is one of the tougher weights at Wilmington, if not the toughest weight. The southwest district has three of the top four wrestlers. With only seven wrestlers listed above exiting Wilmington, a few other names to watch are Diamond (Unioto), Boris (Hillsboro), and Mulkey (Westfall). An important thing to watch at Norwalk is which weight Brown (Sandusky) decides on. He has been at 170 most of the season, but it looks like he will wrestle 195 at his conference tournament.

Like 195, I went back and forth on who to pick at this weight between Stein and Shafer. Shafer was a freshman state placer at this weight two years ago, which is pretty rare to see. He was favored to win it all last year before stumbling in the state quarterfinals and then ultimately finishing in seventh place. Stein, who was a state qualifier last year at 195, has done very well in his move up to 220, beating Matlock and Walker this year. Stein vs Shafer could meet again next year in the state finals, as both are only juniors.

Alliance is very strong up top with three of the top four wrestlers and eight wrestlers in the top 16. Norwalk is also very strong, with four in the top nine, but does lack overall depth after that. Norwalk and Wilmington have the least wrestlers listed above, with nine each. A couple other names to watch are Miner (Lima Bath) at Norwalk and Tatman (Goshen) at Wilmington. Miner just recently beat Chavez, 3-0. Claymont lacks top end strength, but does have pretty good depth. Another name to watch there is Burress (Minerva), as he has a notable win over Wirth during state duals, 4-3.

- Projected Champion: Jack DelGarbino (Girard) Junior – AL1
2. Sean Lipscomb (Firelands) Senior – NO1
 3. Sam Mitchell (River View) Senior – CM1

 39. Eli Cochran (Dayton C-J) Senior – WI9
 40. Tyler Congrove (Vinton County) – CM11

DelGarbino is very fun to watch for a heavyweight, as he moves very well and can put up points. The returning state placer can throw you and go upper-body like most heavyweights, but he can shoot unlike most other heavyweights. He is currently undefeated, but Girard doesn't wrestle in any of the major holiday tournaments. DelGarbino pinned Connolly (Marysville) and Kuttler (Minerva) at Top Gun on his way to capturing the title. He also pinned Bucknavich (Midview) at Solon. Lipscomb (Firelands) and returning state placer Mitchell (River View) seem to be DelGarbino's toughest challengers. I believe both have just one loss, which came to Division 1 foes. Lipscomb got pinned by Division 1 projected placer Cover (Hilliard Darby), while Mitchell lost to Hill (Bedford), 3-2.

Claymont is by far the toughest district at this weight. Claymont has four projected state placers, as well as six in the top 12, and 10 in the top 27. Another name to watch there is Rutledge (Carrollton). He pinned Hurst earlier in the season. Alliance is also very strong at this weight, with three projected state placers and four wrestlers in the Top 10. A couple other names to watch there are Cherevko (Marlington) and Adkins (Akron Springfield). Norwalk and Wilmington are not very strong at this weight, but I would tab Wilmington as the weakest district. Norwalk has one projected placer, while Wilmington has zero. A couple other names to watch at Norwalk are Grothjam (Lima Shawnee) and Schlegel (Defiance).

This weight was a lot tougher to pick a favorite than you may think. Skinner, a three-time junior high state champion, is the clear favorite if he wrestles, but I have heard that he may not be able to wrestle due to something regarding his homeschool program. I do not know if the info I received is good or if he will be able to get everything settled by next week, so I decided to leave him as my projected champ. If Skinner does not wrestle, I think any of the next three can win it all, but would slightly favor Riddle, a returning state runner-up last year while at Legacy Christian. I think Mattin is a year away from winning a state title, as he will likely be back down at 106 next year.

Troy is by far the toughest district at this weight. Troy is not only just tough at the top, but it also has tremendous depth. I think it's very likely that the southwest district gets four state placers regardless of who the qualifiers are. Defiance is also very strong at this weight, with three projected state placers. Garfield Heights lack strength at the top, with zero projected placers, but does have pretty good overall depth. Heath has the worst overall depth, with only five wrestlers listed above. A couple other names to watch there are Overly (Shenandoah) and Yager (Barnesville).

Sanchez, last year's state champ at 106, seems like the clear favorite at this weight, a weight that includes a lot of the same wrestlers from that same weight class that Sanchez won. Sanchez won by convincing fashion in the state finals, 14-2, but did have a much closer match against Turner in the semi-finals; Sanchez won that match, 4-1. Turner wound up wrestling back to finish in third place after losing to Sanchez. Turner has been up at 120 so far this season, but I hear it's likely he ends up here. Sanchez and Turner both meet seeding criteria.

Defiance is very strong at the top with four projected state placers and five wrestlers in the top nine. Garfield Heights or Heath are probably the weakest districts. Garfield Heights is not very strong up top, but that has been a recent trend for 106 and 113 at the northeast district. The district's strength could hinder on which Savoca we see. He wrestled very well the opening month of the season, but has struggled the last month or so. He got pinned by Meeker in 45 seconds, a result I'm not really sure how to comprehend. Savoca then lost to Kline (Rootstown), 8-2. Kline is technically Edwards' backup and will man the 120 spot for the Rovers. Heath is not very strong at the top, but does have good depth and seems to have the classic "five for four" situation. With how crowded 113 has become at Heath, I think we could someone move up to 120.

This weight seemed to be likely occupied by Hoskins, but he has decided to stay at 126 from what I hear. I think we could see a dropper or two from 126, maybe someone like Sanchez or Mattin. Sanchez would have clear motivation to get down here, as he beat Shore last year in the state semi-finals. If we do not see any droppers, then I think Shore is the clear favorite. The future Air Force Falcon and three-time state placer has some very notable wins this year. He beat the returning Division 1 third place finisher Heil (Brunswick), 13-5, and also has a couple wins over Turner (Troy Christian). He has beaten Turner by tech fall and major decision; Turner also finished third at his respective weight class in Division 3. Burns, a three-time state qualifier and two-time state placer, seems to be the top contender here. He recently beat the 113 pound projected state champ Sanchez, 7-2, a couple weeks ago at the SMCC Duals.

Defiance is clearly the toughest district at this weight, with three of the top four wrestlers and five in the top 11. The other three districts are all pretty much evenly balanced, but I would tab Garfield Heights or Heath as the weakest district. Heath is a little tougher up top, but Garfield Heights has the better overall depth. Heath's depth could be boosted if returning state placer Patterson (Ridgedale) makes it back for sectionals, but I hear it's unlikely that we see him at sectionals.

Hoskins is looking to become the 29th four-time state champion in Ohio history. The Oklahoma Sooner commit missed the first half of the season due to injury, but seems to be getting back to his old self. He will definitely be challenged, as I think this could be the toughest 126 pound weight class amongst all of the divisions. Mattin has wins over the projected Division 1 champ and runner-up, Burnett and DiSabato, but does have a loss to Sanchez. Hoskins beat Sanchez in last year's state final, 8-3. Hoskins and Sanchez both meet seeding criteria, so if Sanchez wins the northwest district over Mattin, then Hoskins and Mattin will likely be on the same side. If Mattin wins the district, then that would essentially make it a blind draw.

Defiance looks very strong at this weight, with three projected state placers and six wrestlers in the top 12. This seems like another weight where Garfield Heights doesn't look very strong. 132 is a little deeper at Garfield Heights, so I wouldn't be surprised if we a wrestler or two drop. This has been one of the deeper weights all season in Division 3, which is why I think anyone in the Top 35 has the ability qualify for Columbus.

D’Emilio is currently on pace to win four state titles, as he has already won two state titles in as many years. D’Emilio is currently undefeated, but he unfortunately did not wrestle at Ironman, where he has taken a few blemishes on his record the past couple seasons. D’Emilio, who is bumping up three weight classes from last year, had a very close bout with returning state champ Fields (Brunswick), 3-1, in overtime at Medina. Edwards and Chilson are the top contenders here and I think they’re in their own tier. D’Emilio and Edwards both meet seeding criteria, but that still means Chilson would have a 50/50 chance of being placed on either side.

The southwest district is very strong here. Troy has three projected state placers and five wrestlers in the Top 15. I think all the districts have pretty good depth, but I would have to tab Heath or Garfield Heights as the weakest. Heath is a lot deeper at 138, so I wouldn’t be surprised if we see a wrestler or two drop down to this weight. Defiance will be getting a boost in depth, as it seems Pachthofer will be making his way down from 145.

Isbrandt, a returning state runner-up and Findlay commit, is the slight favorite after beating Ford, 3-1, a few weeks ago at Lima Central Catholic. Ford was fifth last year at this weight, where he beat the 145-pound projected state champ Becker last year in the placement match. I thought in December that we could see Ford move to 145, but that doesn't seem very likely now. This has been one of the deeper weights all season in Division 3. I wouldn't be surprised with anyone in the Top 25 reaching the podium in Columbus.

Troy is very strong at the top obviously, with the top two wrestlers exiting from the southwest. That being said, I would tab Defiance as the strongest district overall. Defiance has four projected state placers and five wrestlers in the top nine. As I mentioned at 132, this is one of the deeper weights at Heath, so I wouldn't be surprised if we see a few kids move out of this weight class. This is also one of the deeper weights at Garfield Heights, as the northeast district has eight wrestlers in the top 19. Another name to watch there is Szuhay (Crestwood).

This is definitely one of the deeper weights in Division 3. I went back and forth on who to pick between Becker and Kissell. Becker, a two-time state placer, beat eventual state champ Rhine (Mechanicsburg) last year in the regular season. Rhine won the same weight class that Kissell was in, which is ultimately why I chose Becker. Kissell, a three-time state placer and Campbell commit, has a notable win over returning Division 1 state qualifier Anderson (Oregon Clay), 8-0, at Solon. An important thing to remember is that Becker and Kissell both meet seeding criteria.

Troy is very strong at this weight class and could get even stronger. The southwest district already has three projected state placers, but I heard early in the season that returning state placer Lefker would be dropping from 152 to 145. I have yet to see Lefker make 145, so I kept him at 152; he would be a spot higher at this weight compared to 152. Defiance is also very strong, with five wrestlers in the top 13. It seems Pachlhofer (Swanton) and Swicegood (Delta) will be dropping down to 132 and 138 for at least their conference tournament. I decided to leave Swicegood here, as 138 looks much deeper at the northwest district. This weight also seems wide open at Heath, as the district only has three wrestlers listed above. A handful of other names to watch there are Heatherington (Bellaire), Woods (Barnesville), Sanders (Newcomerstown), McManus (Marion Pleasant), and Patterson (Ridgedale).

This is another weight where I went back and forth on who to pick between Contos and Stika. Contos transferred in the fall from Oregon Clay, where he was a Division 1 state placer at this weight. He has wrestled a shortened schedule due to transferring, but does have a notable win over Ryder, 7-2, last weekend in Columbus. Stika, a three-time state qualifier and two-time state placer, will be trying to extend Norwayne's consecutive state champ streak to four. Kollin Moore won Norwayne's first state title in 2015 and that was followed up by Zach Steiner's consecutive titles in 2016 and 2017.

This is one of the tougher weights at Garfield Heights, especially at the top, as the northeast district has three projected state placers and six wrestlers in the top 13. Heath is definitely the weakest district here, with only four wrestlers mentioned above. I would suggest 145 at Heath over 152, if anyone is considering both weight classes. A couple other names to watch there are Bruce (Nelsonville-York), and Stanley (Grandview Heights).

It's crazy to me to think that Yinger has yet to capture a state crown. The future Ohio Bobcat is a returning state runner-up and two-time state placer. He transferred last year to Mechanicsburg, but has decided to come back home to Nelsonville-York. Yinger was upset in last year's state finals by the 170-pound projected state champ Lagoa. Yinger's road won't be easy, as the top contender is defending state champion Limongi. Limongi won a wide open 160-pound weight class last year, after moving up to 160 for the latter half of the season. Yinger and Limongi both meet seeding criteria. After returning state placer Belli, I see this weight being wide open as far as placement goes. I wouldn't be surprised if anyone in the Top 20 reaches the podium in Columbus.

It's tough to choose which districts are the toughest or the weakest here, as all four are pretty balanced. Troy is very strong at the top, with three projected state placers. Heath is also very strong at the top with two of the top three wrestlers exiting there, but it does lack good overall depth. Garfield Heights has only one projected state placer, but this is definitely one of the deepest weights there. The northeast district has 15 wrestlers in the top 33. Defiance has two projected state placers and possible sleeper Marvin exiting there. Marvin just recently beat Ryder, 6-1, when Ryder bumped up to 160 last weekend in Columbus. I also hear that Brown (Ayersville) and Rhamy (Patrick Henry) could drop from 170 at Defiance.

Lagoa, a returning freshman state champ, will look to stay on pace for four state titles. Like I mentioned at 160, Lagoa upset Yinger in the state finals last year, 6-3. It was tough choosing the top contender behind Lagoa between Smucker and Mendoza. Smucker, who finished fourth last year at 152, missed the first half of the season due to injury, but has returned. The other Mendoza is a returning state semi-finalist and fifth place finisher at this weight class. Lagoa is the only wrestler that meets criteria, but since Smucker is exiting the same district, its likely Smucker will be on the opposite side in Columbus.

Garfield Heights and Defiance are both very strong, with each having three projected state placers respectively. Defiance definitely gets the label as the toughest district, as the northwest district has 15 of the top 31 wrestlers. Troy and Heath are not very strong at this weight, but Troy has the better depth. Heath has only four wrestlers listed above, so another name to watch there is McFarland (Martins Ferry).

This should be one of the more exciting weights to watch unfold in Columbus, but Stanley seems like the obvious pick here. Returning state placer Stanley is currently undefeated and beat returning Division 1 state placer Wokojance, 13-1, earlier in the season. I see any on the next three guys as Stanley’s toughest challengers. Beemer and Stoll finished in fourth and seventh place last year at 195, while Langguth took sixth place at 170 respectively. Langguth and Stoll have met three times already this season, with Langguth leading the series, 2-1. Stanley is the only wrestler that meets seeding criteria, but it’s likely that Langguth will be on the opposite side since both exit the same district.

Garfield Heights is strong up top with two of the top four wrestlers. The northeast district is also very deep at this weight and just got even deeper recently, when 2016 state qualifier Isaac dropped from 195. Isaac has been up at 220 the last two post-seasons, so I’m not really sure where to place him. Defiance and Troy are also very strong up top, with three projected state placers each, but Defiance has the much better depth of the two, with 10 wrestlers in the Top 30. Troy only has five wrestlers listed above, so a few other names to watch there are Stoops (Cory-Rawson), Brown (Middletown Madison) and Wieging (Delphos St. John’s). Heath is obviously the weakest district at this weight, with only five wrestlers listed above. Another name to watch there is Jackson (Barnesville).

Last year I thought 195 was tougher in Division 3 compared to the other divisions - I think that this may be the case once again. Hoover, a Northern Illinois commit, returns to this weight for the third consecutive season. He was third last year after finishing as a state runner-up the year prior, but it seemed like Hoover's apparent leg injury was hindering his abilities. I think whoever wins the Garfield Heights district is Hoover's toughest challenger, whether that is Boyle or Shephard. Boyle, a returning fourth place state finisher at 220, just recently cut down to 195 a couple weeks ago for state duals and I hear it's likely he stays at 195. Shephard is currently undefeated, with his most notable win coming over projected Division 1 state placer Clemson (Canton McKinley). Although I think Boyle and Shephard are Hoover's toughest competition, I wouldn't be surprised if he anyone in the top six reaches the state finals.

Garfield Heights is very strong at the weight class, with three projected state placers and seven wrestlers in the top 17. Defiance is by far the deepest district overall, with 15 wrestlers listed above. Another name to watch there is Martin (Seneca East). He was ranked all season, but has taken a quite a few losses lately. Heath is very strong up top, with three wrestlers in the top 11, but does lack overall depth. Heath is much stronger at 220, so I wouldn't be surprised if we see a couple wrestlers drop down. A few other names to watch there are Speakman (West Jefferson), Sanders (Newcomerstown), and Opperman (Liberty Union). I would probably tab Troy as the weakest district here, especially now that DeHart (Versailles) is not wrestling.

Projected Champion: Gage Willis (Pymatuning Valley) Senior – GH1

2. Paul Skye (Mogadore) Senior – GH2
3. Chris Kuhn (SMCC) Senior – DEF1
4. Caleb Carpenter (Liberty Center) Junior – DEF2
5. Crawford Hamrick (Tuslaw) Senior – GH3
6. Donovan McCollister (Nelsonville-York) Junior – HE1
7. Noah Price (Fremont St. Joseph C.C.) Junior – DEF3
8. Sam Auble (Orrville) Senior – GH4
9. River Pappas (Richmond Edison) Junior – HE2
10. Seth Bailey (Plymouth) Senior – DEF4
11. Brenden Dalton (Miami East) Junior – TR1
12. Dalton Richard (Delta) Junior – DEF5
13. Zach Meade (Barnesville) Junior – HE3
14. Ryan Thompson (New Middletown Springfield) Senior – GH5
15. Nick Baker (Troy Christian) Junior – TR2
16. Dalton Rice (Shenandoah) Junior – HE4
17. Kevin Cuervo (Steubenville C.C.) Senior – HE5
18. Keith Wilson (Martins Ferry) Senior – HE6
19. Jamie Baisden (Marion Pleasant) Senior – HE7
20. Dylan Sargeant (Columbus Grove) Sophomore – TR3
21. Ty Stevenson (Preble Shawnee) Sophomore – TR4
22. Greg Wilson (Swanton) Senior – DEF6
23. Bradley Lewis (Bethel-Tate) Senior – TR5
24. Spencer Martin (Tinora) Senior – DEF7

34. Brice Markel (McComb) Junior – DEF13
35. Montgomery Walls (Monroeville) Junior – DEF14
36. Tyler Cooper (Mount Gilead) Senior – HE11

Willis is the obvious favorite here, but I do see him being challenged along the way. The future Edinboro Fighting Scott went undefeated last year and captured the 195-pound state crown. Willis was a state finalist the year before as well, when he finished as a state runner-up at 182. Willis is currently undefeated once again this season and sports an 80-match win streak, dating back to last year. It seems Willis is still growing and it's likely he wrestles heavyweight at the next level. Willis is the only wrestler that meets seeding criteria, but Skye and Willis both exit Garfield Heights, so it's likely they will be on opposite sides in Columbus.

Garfield Heights is very strong here, with four projected state placers and five wrestlers in the top 14. While the northeast district is very strong up top, it definitely lacks overall depth. A couple other names to watch there are Moore (Columbiana) and junior high state placer Cottrell (Grand Valley). Defiance is the deepest district, with 14 wrestlers listed above; Heath also has very good depth. I think this is definitely one of, if not the toughest weight at Heath. Like I stated at 195, I think we could see a wrestler or two drop down. Troy is by far the weakest district at this weight, with zero projected state placers and only six wrestlers listed above. Another wrestler who could be in the mix there is Magnall (Corey-Rawson), as he has a notable win over Elchert.

Projected Champion: Brian Stears (Williamsburg) Senior – TR1

2. Derrick Elrod (Ashtabula St. John) Senior – GH1
3. Hunter Bodkin (Martins Ferry) Senior – HE1
4. Jeffrey Ware (Versailles) Senior – TR2
5. Thomas Schwieterman (Coldwater) Senior – TR3
6. Brayden Phillips (Tuslaw) Senior – GH2
7. Ben Ferrar (Waynedale) Senior – GH3
8. Lane Fry (Ashland Crestview) Senior – DEF1
9. Pat Sheridan (VASJ) Senior – GH4
10. Josh Robinson (Shadyside) Senior – HE2
11. Thomas Lytle (Swanton) Senior – DEF2
12. Joe Warren (Smithville) Junior – GH5
13. Mitchell Hurlbut (Fredericktown) Senior – HE3
14. C.J. McCrimmon (SMCC) Senior – DEF3
15. Noah Koch (Genoa) Junior – DEF4
16. J.D. McCardle (Clearview) Senior – GH6
17. Kade Clark (Union Local) Senior – HE4
18. Layne Dunlap (Bridgeport) Senior – HE5

39. Howard Pleasant (Tinora) Senior – DEF12
40. Noah Conklin (Montpelier) Senior – DEF13

Stears finished fourth last year at the Troy district, but then surprisingly finished higher the following week in Columbus. Stears dropped his opening round match before reeling off five wins in a row to finish in third place. To my knowledge Stears hasn't lost since last year's first round match, so I believe he is undefeated on the season. His most notable win is over returning Division 1 state placer Moore-Nash (Elder), 6-3. Bodkin, who was a state qualifier last year at 220, had a great start to the season. He won Brecksville, also beating Moore-Nash. He has since lost to Robinson and Potts (Columbus DeSales). Elrod on the other hand has been red hot the last month or so. He has wins over projected state placer Schweiterman, returning state qualifier Lytle, and returning state placer Phillips. This weight has been crazy all year and doesn't seem to have a lot of clarity, but that's common at heavyweight. With that being said, it wouldn't surprise me if anyone in the Top 20 reaches the podium or if anyone in the Top 40 qualifies for the state tournament.

Troy and Garfield Heights are both very strong at this weight. Troy is the strongest at the top, with three of the top five wrestlers, but the district lacks overall depth, with only six wrestlers listed above. Garfield Heights also has three projected state placers, but has much better depth, with nine wrestlers in the top 22. A few other names that could be in the mix at Troy are Lafontain (Chill. Southeastern), Glenn (Bethel-Tate), Reel (Wayne Trace), and Leasure (Triad). Heath has only seven wrestlers listed above, but all are in the top 23. A couple other names to watch there are Lohr (West Jefferson), Fisher (Mount Gilead) and Soderberg (Columbus Academy). Defiance may only have one wrestler in the Top 10, but it is still very strong. The northwest district has tremendous depth with 13 wrestlers listed above. Defiance could easily get three placers, as Koch recently beat Phillips last weekend in Columbus. Defiance may also have the tallest wrestler in the state, but I can't say that with 100% certainty. Leroux, according to a few football profiles I found online, is listed at 6'8" and 6'9", 300+ pounds, and yes, his grade above is correct.
